Opens Subscription for Inspector Norton's Family

The Boston AMERICAN subscribes $100 to a fund to be raised by popular subscription for the family of the late Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, a brave policeman who died in performance of his duty.

The AMERICAN asks all its readers to subscribe to this fund—no matter how small the amount, it will be cheerfully received and it should be cheerfully given as a tribute to Norton. Never did any man do his duty more thoroughly or more bravely. His murder was cowardly. Norton did not flinch in the face of death. He laid down his life freely, as every member of the Boston police force would do in a like emergency. The AMERICAN asks you to do your duty by sending a contribution to the Cashier at the AMERICAN office, 80 Summer street, or to Commissioner of Police O'Meara. Acknowledgment of subscriptions will be made in the AMERICAN and other newspapers of Boston.

PROCLAIMS ANGELES PRESIDENT OF MEXICO

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., June 20.—The Mexican delegation to the mediation conference received a dispatch today stating that General Villa had deposed General Carranza and proclaimed General Felipe Angeles president of Mexico. The following statement was issued at the headquarters of the Mexican delegates:

"The Mexican counsul at El Paso telegraphs that from private messages intercepted at Juarez it has been learned that there is no truth in the reports asserting that all differences between the Villaist and Carranzaist factions have been satisfactorily adjusted.

"Villa has issued a declaration addressed to Americans, proclaiming General Angeles President of Mexico. Carranza is completing plans to de-

9 DEAD BY FIRE IN AIR COLLISION

VIENNA, June 20.—The worst disaster in the history of aviation occurred at the military aerodrome on the outskirts of this city to-day when nine men, including five army and navy officers, were killed in a collision between an aeroplane and a dirigible balloon.

The two air craft were maneuvring at a height of about 600 feet when the aeroplane, a powerful Farman biplane, crashed into the gas bag of the dirigible Parseval.

There was a loud explosion, followed by a burst of flames, which ignited both craft. The blazing balloon and the burning aeroplane dropped through space like flaming meteors.

DEATH IN TWO FORMS.

Those on board faced inevitable death in two forms, either to remain on board and burn to death or leap to destruction from the wrecked and burning craft.

The spectators upon the ground stood rooted in horror at the sight. They could see figures clinging to the framework of the big dirigible as the struts buckled and broke.

The aeroplane was wrecked by the impact and immediately turned over. The aviator had been strapped to his seat and hung helpless in the burning wreckage.

Some of the victims had all their clothing burned off and their bodies were so black and charred as to be almost unrecognizable.

At the time of the catastrophe a number of aeroplanes were in the air, going through the regular manoeuvres.

INVESTIGATION BEGUN.

An investigation of the tragedy was commenced immediately. Officers of the aerial squad expressed the opinion that the aviator of the aeroplane had momentarily lost control of his machine, or the balloon, which was of the Koertig type used by the Austrian army, had failed to answer her helm.

In addition to the pilots and the crew the passengers on the Parseval and the Farman biplane included a captain and four lieutenants. As soon as the burning debris reached the ground soldiers began pouring water upon it and tearing it apart in the hope that the lives of some of the victims might yet be saved.

Doctors were rushed to the scene, but it was found that all who had not been killed outright were so badly burned and shaken by the fall that death was only a matter of a few minutes.

SIX IN THE DIRIGIBLE.

The dirigible was in command of Captain Hauseworth of the Austrian army. Accompanying him were three lieutenants and two corporals.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the balloon ascended at Fissamend to fly to Moerigsburg for the purpose of taking photographs to test a new aerostereographing apparatus. For an hour the balloon journeyed about the aerodrome. Then the biplane set off on its journey.

The biplane circled the balloon several times and then shot out to sea over the Parseval. He speedily misjudged his distance, for instead of topping the Koertig ballon the biplane rammed and punctured the gas bag.

Two Firemen Hurt, Church Burned in $25,000 Saugus Fire

Hoseman H. R. Hanson of Revere and J. A. Hayes of the Saugus department were injured and property valued at $25,000 was destroyed at a fire in Cliftondale, Saugus. Among the buildings was the Cliftondale Methodist Church. Nine other buildings were damaged.

The fire started in a barn in the rear of the home of Dr. Harlan A. Danforth, No. 276 Lincoln avenue, spread to the Danforth residence and, carried by the wind, attacked the Methodist church nearby. The fire got beyond the control of the Saugus fire department, and help was summoned from Revere, Lynn and Malden.

SPECIAL GRAND JURY TO ACT IN KILLING OF POLICE INSPECTOR

Joseph Duddy, charged with the murder—with Lawrence Robinson—of Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, was arraigned in the Municipal Court today and held without bail.

Robinson is at the City Hospital with three bullets in his body, under close guard. As soon as he is strong enough to be moved he will be brought to court.

To Call Special Grand Jury.

District Attorney Pelletier conferred today witht police authorities and thereafter announced that he would call a special Grand Jury Tuesday and present to them the evidence in connection with Norton's murder.

Inspector Norton's body was taken this afternoon to his home and will remain there till the funeral Tuesday.

Captain Ainsley C. Armstrong had every witness of the shooting at police headquarters and was busy in preparing the government's case.

These were the five big developments today which followed the sensational revolver battle in the Boylston Cafe late yesterday. Five men went into that cafe to arrest one, wanted for murder. That one opened fire upon his would-be captors, killed one, and was himself captured with three bullets in his body.

Bullets Hit Slayer in Flight.

The affray occurred before the supper hour, and there were only six customers in the Boylston Cafe. Otherwise there would have been a dangerous panic. Lawrence Robinson and Joseph Duddy, seated at a table, were accosted by the five officers. There was a brief scuffle ,a muffled report, then three crackling shots as Robinson fled to the street, and in another minute quiet had fallen, Robinson was captive and Duddy had also been arrested.

Robinson was captured in an alley by the Hotel Brewster and arrested by Mounted Policeman Dickinson.

There was a dramatic scene when Joseph Duddy was

MILITANTS GET A HEARING FROM ASQUITH

LONDON, June 20.—The militant suffragettes were recognized officially by the British government for the first time today when a deputation of six women were received in audience by Premier Asquith in accordance with a promise he made to Sylvia Pankhurst on Thursday.

Premier Asquith showed a sympathetic bearing in his attitude toward the delegates of the militants, all of whom were working women.

One of the first demands of the deputation was that the premier would exercise his authority to have the criminal charges against Miss Pankhurst set aside so that she could enjoy freedom. The women told Mr. Asquith that Sylvia's health had been shattered by her experiences in English jails.

Premier Asquith listened patiently, then said he would speak to Home Secretary McKenna to see what could be done about securing the unconditional release of Sylvia Pankhurst. Miss Pankhurst is at liberty now under the authority of the cat and mouse bill. She was released indefinitely from Holloway jail on Thursday because of illness induced by her refusal to eat or drink.

A suffragette arson squad invaded the north of Wales today, burning a railway station near Wexham. The women attempted to set fire to a freight train, but were frightened away before they accomplished their purpose.

The Premier's reply to the representations of the suffragettes was non-committal. He made no definite promise, but said:

"If the voting franchise must be extended to women it should be given on a broad, democratic basis."

SLAYER'S PAL IS HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

brought into court today. Early this morning Captain Armstrong, after a night of work on the case, went to Judge Ely in the judge's lobby and applied for a warrant charging Robinson and Duddy with murder.

At 11 o'clock Duddy was brought into court before Judge Parmenter. The throng in the courtroom rose and craned to see him. Duddy is a small man, with a mop of black hair, broad shoulders and a pale countenance. He seemed to have been weeping. He is only a boy, about twenty years old.

Duddy was brought to face the judge, and Clerk Edward C. Lord read the complaint charging that he did "feloniously and wilfully, with Lawrence Robinson, discharge and fire one revolver"—and so on through the law's stern language.

PLEADS INNOCENCE.

When Clerk Lord had finished Duddy said clearly: "I did not do it." This was accepted as a plea of not guilty. Neither Duddy nor Robinson have yet secured attorneys.

Judge Parmenter thereupon remanded Duddy to the Charles street jail, and appointed a hearing for June 27. Captain Armstrong, who had charge of the case for the police, simply said:

"I ask the court to hold this man under a continuance, as the grand jury will be in on Tuesday to consider the case."

Probation Officer Joseph A. McManus had talked with Duddy before he was arraigned. Duddy told him he was twenty years old, lived at No. 110 Bingham street, Pittsburgh, and that he met Robinson in Toledo, about two months ago.

"We have travelled together ever since," he said. "I am a bell boy. I didn't know Robinson had a gun when we went to the cafe."

Duddy was rigorously questioned by the police today before his arraignment.

The physicians at the City Hospital sent word that Robinson is in no danger from his wound. He lost some blood, but needs only rest for a complete recovery. He has shown remarkable nerve since his arrest. When at the police station they asked him if he was wounded, he said: "Yes, I'm full of lead."

The hospital authorities were amazed at the immaculate condition of the man. His clothes were neat and well kept and of the finest make. His nails, both on his fingers and toes, showed perfect care by experts. He was in magnificent physical condition, and was evidently not a drinking man, nor did he use drugs of any kind.

UNDER CLOSE GUARD.

During the night he was guarded by Officers Claflin and Patterson. Inspector Patterson was one of the best friends of the dead man, and Claflin was in the party that entered the restaurant to arrest Robinson.

District Attorney Pelletier was early at his office today, and immediately took up the investigation of the case. He went into conference with Captain Armstrong and Inspector McCarthy at headquarters. Officer Claflin was also called into this conference, which was held behind closed doors.

When the conference ended, Mr. Pelletier said:

"I shall call a special grand jury at once, to meet on Tuesday, and I shall present to them the evidence respecting Inspector Norton's death. Duddy's case and Robinson's will be presented together, and the grand jury will act as it sees fit."

It is expected that in view of the fact Robinson's injuries are slight, if he is indicted he may be brought to trial in July. The disposition at police headquarters and in the District Attorney's office is to secure swift justice for the two men.

MOURN INSPECTOR.

Inspector Norton was mourned today by the whole department. There was none of the customary good-humored joking at police headquarters. Men went about with sober faces. Some went to the Relife Hospital to see if they could do anything to help arrangements for the dead man's funeral. Others, the more intimate friends, went to the home in Dorchester to comfort Mrs. Norton.

A special detail will be appointed to attend the funeral Tuesday, and the body will lie at the home from this afternoon till Tuesday.

Captain Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation took charge of the case immediately after it was reported to the police. His men were at work practically all night. Today he personally questioned every witness to the shooting who could be found. He expects to have his case against Robinson and Duddy in condition to present to the Grand Jury Tuesday in the simplest and quickest form.

PLAN STEAMER LINE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND HUB

C. J. Medzihovsky, commercial attache of the Russian embassy at Washington, called on Mayor Curley today and discussed the possibility of securing for Boston a new steamship line between this port and Russia.

Such a line would promote direct trade relations between Russia and the United States, and facilitate the export of leather and hides from Russia. Boston would benefit with an increase of business, estimated at from $20,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year.

"I have every hope of carrying the plan through," said Mayor Curley after the conference. "I believe this is the biggest business proposition for Boston made for a generation."

Mr. Medzikhovsky, with William S. McNary, Curtis Guild, Jr., Penal Commissioner Fred S. Gore and John N. Cole of the Industrial and Development Board, left the office of the Mayor for a minute inspection of the dock system.

Mayor Curley will entertain the attache at luncheon on Monday, where a final discussion as to the plans will take place.

WIDOWS OF TWO GUNMEN SPURN "MOVIE" OFFER

NEW YORK, June 20.—An offer to pose for the "Jack" Rose motion picture concern has been made to Mrs. Lillie Rosenberg and Mrs. Lillie Horowitz, widows of the gunmen, by the man whose evidence was largely instrumental in sending their husbands, "Lefty Louie" and "Gyp the Blood" to the electric chair. The offer was rejected.

"Of course, I refused to pose for the moving picture concern that 'Jack' Rose is interested in. I wouldn't accept any such offer, coming from him for $1,000,000," said Mrs. Rosenberg.

"I wouldn't have anything to do with anything 'Jack' Rose is interested in, even though I were starving to death."

Rose is now in Boston working up sceneries for his firm, known as the Humanology Film Company.

Mrs. Rosenberg said a man representing a motion picture concern came to see her and Mrs. Horowitz a short while after the conviction of Charles Becker.

Mrs. Rosenberg refused to state the sum offered to her and Mrs. Horowitz to appear in the picture play, but it was learned from another source that Mrs. Rosenberg was to receive $500 on leaving New York for Boston to pose, and after the films had been passed by the Board of Censors that she was to receive $1,500 more, making $2,000 in all. Mrs. Horowitz was to get practically a similar sum.

Brookline Girl Weds New Yorker Hastily

A business telegram to return at once to New York was the cause of the hurried marriage of Miss Marion Dana of Brookline and Harold Kenneth Smoot of New York by the Rev. William W. Iliffe which took place in Brookline a week ago.

Their engagement was announced about three weeks ago. The young man came over from New York in his automobile, planning to remain here until after his marriage, which was set for a date later in the season. The receipt of the telegram compelled the young couple to seek the aid of Judge Charles F. Perkins of the Brookline court, in order that the five-days' notice might be avoided.

GENERAL CARRANZA, IN FEAR OF HIS LIFE, UNDER HEAVY GUARD

LAREDO, Texas, June 20.—Extraordinary precautions are being taken to protect the life of General Venustiano Carranza as a result of the break with Francisco Villa. The guard about the Carranza residence and the palace has been doubled.

A conference of the Carranza generals who still remain loyal has been called to decide upon a Cabinet. Villa may be asked to select a part of the Cabinet. There is reason to believe that such a concession from Carranza would do much to heal the breach. It can be said definitely, however, Carranza has not indicated whom he intends to appoint.

An absolute censorship has been established on all news relating to the breach with Villa. The one telegraph wire running out of Saltillo is not even permitted to carry anything concerning Villa's reported plans. Carranza refuses to discuss the seizure of the Juarez telegraph office or to make any statement bearing upon his present difficulties.

PEACE CONFERENCES EXPECTED TO END WITHIN 12 HOURS

By LAURENCE TOD,

Staff Correspondent of the American.

MEDIATION HEADQUARTERS, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 29.—Unless unexpected developments cause a sudden change the Mexican mediation conferences will terminate within twelve hours.

Waiting only for the arrival of Ambassador Naon of Argentina with official confirmation of reports from Washington that President Wilson had rejected the plea of the South American powers, the mediation colony prepared today to pack up and leave.

Dispatches which told of the interviews of Dr. Naon with President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and the Constitutional representative, Louis Carbrera, brought word that the American government refused to consider a compromise of its demands for a Constitutional Provisional President in Mexico.

FAINT RAY OF HOPE.

The same dispatches quoted Dr. Naon as being hopeful of an adjustment, but no one here will venture a prediction that either President Wilson or General Huerta will yield. A dispatch from Mexico City, saying the Foreign Minister had declared the negotiations would be resumed on Monday, brought a ray of hope, though the Huerta delegates showed no signs of making concessions.

They believe the action o the United States in brushing asidetheir opposition to its program in Mexico will arouse a storm of resentment throughout South and Central America. They look upon the visit of Dr. Naon to Washington as the symbol of a challenge which Latin America throws down to the United Stats to enter Mexico at her peril.

The belief has steadily grownhere that Argentine, Brazil and Chili have acted in this mediation affair as guardians of Latin America against possible northern encroachments. Still bitter at the experience of Colombia in the Panama affair, South and Central America are ready to provetheir sympathy with the Huerta government in popular demonstrations and press campaigns.

WILL REJECT THEM ALL.

The American and Huerta delegates appeared for their formal confeence with three mediators this moning. The two sides will report their ejection of the other's plans of settlement. The mediators will proably suggest that Pedro Lascurain be restored to the provisional presiency. This will be declined by Justic Lamar and Mr. Lehmann. Other ames will be put forward by the meditors, and these in turn will be cast side. The conference will then, be adjourned until the final dissolution may be voted.

News of the general advance of three rebel armies toward Mexico City was eagerly scanned by Mexicans and mediators. The mediators were understood to have hoped the United States would repudiate Villa if he became supreme chief of the Constitutionalists. Since Carranza is to remain at the head of the political structure of the revolution, they find no further chance for a change of President Wilson's policy. The Mexican delegates will no longer hope for an armistice and will become more defiant of American demands.

FIRST COMPLETE STORY OF DEATH BATTLE BY POLICE AND GUNMEN IN CAFE

NORTON MARTYR TO DUTY

This is the story of the shooting of Inspector Thomas J. Norton by Lawrence Robinson.

Robinson and his pal, Joseph Duddy, entered the Boylston Cafe about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and sat down at a table in the corner. They ordered nothing to drink, but a light lunch.

Miss Helen Hanan was the waitress who served them. They were well dressed, carried canes and seemed perfectly at ease.

The restaurant was almost empty. There were less than half a dozen other patrons in the place. The two men—who were at a table in the corner nearest Washington street—had the place almost to themselves.

Two Pinkerton detectives, Guy C. Packard and Daniel Green, had been trailing Robinson. He was wanted for a triple murder in Grand Rapids, and there was $2,000 on his head. Knowing from his record he might follow the circus, they had been specially active this week, and had "picked him up" in a downtown street, lost him, found him again, lost him a second time, and finally struck and held the trail.

TRAILED TO CAFE.

They saw Robinson and his partner, Duddy, enter the Boylston Cafe. While one of them watched the two entrances to the cafe, the other telephoned to police headquarters. They had no authority to make an arrest.

Inspector Norton was on the point of leaving headquarters for the day when the call came. He might have avoided the duty without difficulty—but that was not Tom Norton's way. Without hesitation, he set out for the cafe with two other officers. Thus the party that gathered on the street outside the cafe included Green and Packard, Inspector Norton and Detectives James R. Claflin and John F. McCarthy of headquarters.

The three regular detectives and the two private operators held a private consultation on Washington street near the corner of Boylston and decided to enter the cafe and arrest their man.

Norton was anxious to have the affair over. At home his wife was dressing to attend the graduation of one of their daughters from the high school. Norton had been "on the street" all day and was somewhat tired.

HASTENED THE ARREST.

"Let's get it over, boys, so come on. I'm in a hurry," Norton said to his companions as they turned and entered the cafe.

Seated in an obscure corner under the sidewalk, directly under the corner of Washington and Boylston streets, sat Robinson and his pal. They had ordered their dinner and were about to eat it.

The five detectives walked into the place, passed the cashier's desk and Norton took the lead. "There he is," whispered one of the Pinkertons.

Norton, with his hands free, stepped up to Robinson.

"I am a police inspector; I want you. Come on," he said.

No sooner had the words left his mouth than Robinson was on his feet. With his left hand he tipped the table over, the opposite side striking Norton in the legs. With his right hand he reached for his .32-caliber automatic revolver and pulled the trigger. The bullet struck Norton directly below the heart. So close was the shot fired that Norton's clothing was slightly burned.

No one expected such action. The detectives knew the character of the man, but they little thought Robinson would be foolish enough to attempt to make a "get-away" with five men against him.

NORTON COLLAPSES.

When the table was tipped over, Robinson's pal crawled under the table cloth and was creeping along the floor making toward the door.

Regaining his equilibrium, Robinson was the first to move. He made a dash for the door and reached the street. Norton, though wounded, was after him with his drawn revolver. The detectives followed.

Daniels, who had escaped the officers, was on the street. It was up to a uniformed officer to capture him.

It was on the stairs, almost to the sidewalk, that Norton gave the first intimation to anyone that he was seriously wounded. Placing his hand over his heart, he turned white and said: "Boys, I guess they got me. Don't let him get away."

He then collapsed and, while the two Pinkerton detectives sent hurried calls for the police ambulance and for automobiles, the two detectives gave chase to the escaping gunman and his pal.

Only three shots were fired in the cafe. One by Robinson, which eventually killed Norton, and two by the detectives, both of which took effect in Robinson's body.

SHOT BY MOUNTED OFFICER.

Once on the street, the desperadoes made a bold attempt to get away. The shooting had attracted the attention of Crossing Officer Hart and he turned from his post at the corner of Washington and Boylston streets to see the men coming out of the cafe with their revolvers in their hands.

At the same time Mounted Officer Dickinson appeared and, sighting Robinson dashing across the street with his gun ready for action, he hit his horse, rode to the curbstone and jumped off.

Robinson entered the alleyway between the Hotel Brewster and Hotel Jacot and was about to crouch in a corner to fire when Dickinson leveled his gun and fired. The bullet entered Robinson's arm and came out through his neck. He fell and in a second Dickinson had kicked the gun, which still contained nine loaded shells, from the man's hand and was on him. Handcuffs were brought into play as well as twisters and the worst character the Boston police have had to deal with in many years was under arrest.

He was still full of fight, however, and attempted to wrestle Dickinson, but the strain of the twisters tightening on his wrist stopped him. The blod was flowing from his wounds and he was weakening.

In the meantime Patrolman Hart had chased Daniels up Boylston street toward the Common and had got him without any trouble within a hundred feet of the entrance to the cafe. He put up no fight and was taken to Station 4, directly around the corner, without any trouble.

DANIELS PETTY THIEF.

Dickinson took his man to the Lagrange street station and when he brought him up to the desk noticed for the first time that Robinson was shot. A hurried call was sent for an ambulance and Robinson, under heavy police guard, was taken to the City Hospital.

With Robinson under arrest and Daniels safely locked up in a cell the police turned their attention to Norton.

Becoming impatient because the ambulance was slow to arrive, Patrolmen Detectives Claflin and McCarthy pressed a taxicab into service and, breaking all traffic rules, rushed Norton to the hospital. He was conscious all the way to the hospital but did not say a word. His gun dropped from his hand to the floor of the machine and his two companions loosed his collar and clothing and made him comfortable.

DIED ON TABLE.

His first and last words when he discovered he was shot were: "Call my wife. Tell her to come."

Upon the arrival of the taxicab at the Relief Station Norton was placed on the operating table. A priest, the Rev. Father Smith of St. Mary's Church, Endicott street, was summoned and administered the last rites of the church.

Inspector Norton died on the operating table at 5.09.

At the hospital at the time Norton arrived was Inspector James Dennessey, a long time friend of the Inspector, and he was at his companion's side in a minute, holding his hand when he breathed his last.

When Norton was pronounced dead, Detectives Claflin and McCarthy returned to headquarters and reported to Chief McGarr. The two men were closeted with their chief for nearly an hour.

Chief Inspector McGarr was completely overcome. He was unable to make a statement till nearly midnight.

When Daniels arrived at headquarters, handcuffed between two officers, he was put through a stiff examination, in which Chief McGarr took an important part.

Daniels told the officers he had met Robinson in Boston and that they had worked together. They made no friends and kept by themselves, traveling much of the time and living at the Hotel Commonwealth, where they occupied a suite of rooms.

The police searched the apartments and found an extensive wardrobe of the best tailormade suits, silk shirts, the best of underwear, gold stickpins and jewelry and a collection of canes.

Both men carried canes when they entered the cafe. They were dressed in the height of fashion and appeared to be prosperous sporting men, such as are seen at the New York race tracks. No one would have taken either for a desperate character.

The shooting was all over so quickly that few persons realized what had happened. Persons entered the cafe, ordered their dinners and ate and it was not until the AMERICAN extras brought the first news of the murder and arrests that the excitement started.

Last Brave Words of Murdered Inspector.

When Police Inspector Norton fell dying on Boylston street sidewalk, he gasped:

"Boys, I guess they got me. Don't let him get away."

His last words at the Relief Hospital were:

"Call my wife. Tell her to come."

COUNCIL MAY PENSION WIDOW OF NORTON AT MEETING MONDAY

Councilman Thomas Kenny will seek to have an order passed by the City Council Monday ordering the payment of $300 a year to Mrs. Thomas J. Norton, widow of the slain police inspector, as long as she remains unmarried.

Under the law, Inspector Norton, having served over ten years on the police force receives his pension by a direct act of the City Council instead of waiting for the special act of the Legislature. Once before, when Patrolman Peterson was shot in Bowdoin square, the City Council adopted a similar order for the benefit of his widow.

Chapter 178, Acts of 1887, provides that if any member of the Police Department shall die from injuries received while in the discharge of his duty, and shall leave a widow, or, no widow, a child, or children, under the age of sixteen years, a sum not exceeding $300 may be paid by the city of Boston as an annuity to such widow as long as she remains unmarried, or for the benefit of child, or children, under the age of sixteen years, and the police commissioner may from time to time determine the amount of such an annuity within the said limit.

The usual procedure under this act is for the widow, or the orphans, to petition the City Council for an annuity, and should an order granting it be passed and approved by the Mayor, the police commissioner by investigation, and if deemed necessary, after a hearing, may determine the amount to be paid, and such amount be changed from time to time at his discretion.

SIX OFFICERS MAY SHARE IN OFFERED REWARD OF $2,000

Should Lawrence Robinson, desperado and gunman, who shot and killed Inspector Norton, be found guilty and electrocuted in Massachusetts, the reward of $2,000 for his capture may not be awarded.

The reward was offered for his arrest in connection with the triple murder and robbery in Grand Rapids. He is now charged with the murder of Inspector Norton, and must stand trial on that charge first.

The situation involves a most interesting legal phase. Should the persons who offered the reward decide to give it to Robinson's captors, six men appear to be eligible.

They are Patrolman Detectives Claflin and McCarthy of headquarters, Green and McDonald of the Pinkerton agency, Dickinson, the mounted officer, and Patrolman Hart. The six men, with Norton, all figured in the arrest, and the technical points involved may result in a division or a withdrawal.

The reward is made up of two sums, one of $1,000 offered by the Jewelers' Security Alliance, "for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the robbers who robbed the store of John J. Thompson, Grand Rapids, Mich., and killed three employes," the other, also of $1,000, offered by Kent County, Mich., "for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Robinson."

FORMER CHIEF WATTS TELLS OF BIG CASES HANDLED BY NORTON

"I can truthfully say that Inspector Norton was the best all-round man I had working under me when I was chief of police," said William B. Watts.

"I remember Norton as a quiet, conscientious man, who never put himself unduly forward, but a man on whom I could rely in whatever work I gave him. I was, perhaps, closer to him, personally, than to most of the men on the staff—I always called him Tom, and had a high personal regard for him.

"Norton was the man who arrested Richard Morrison, alias 'Massachusetts Dick,' one of the gang of yeggmen who were rounded up after a vicious pistol and club fight on Washington street in 1907.

"It was a hot fight, as I remember it, with plenty of shooting, and a long scuffle on the road, before the men were overpowered. The whole gang was rounded up, and they were later sentenced to Atlanta for breaking into a postoffice in Ponkapoag. Norton personally captured the worst of them, 'Massachusetts Dick.'

"I remember another time when he was under fire. He was one of the inspectors specially detailed at the time the gang of yeggs for three days terrorized the region about Franklin Park and Forest Hills in 1908. Those were exciting days, and I was never more thankful than I was then that I had a man of his coolness and reliability to depend on."

WAITRESS SERVING NORTON'S SLAYER TELLS OF THE GUN FIGHT

"I had just finished serving them their food and had walked a short distance way," said Helen Hanan of No. 47 Pembroke street, South End, telling of the tragedy in the Boylston Cafe.

"They had come in here a short time before and had ordered a light lunch, but nothing to drink. When I served them I walked near the door and was standing there when the fight began, and then I heard the shot which was fired. This was followed later by shots which were fired at Robinson as he fled out of the place."

Miss Hanan was almost prostrated by the affair.

Semi-Annual Sale, Beginning Monday, June 22

Twice a year we hold a sale of sample hosiery. The variety and quality of the goods, and the very low prices are so attractive that many of our customers await these sales to purchase a six months' supply of hosiery.

We secure the samples offered at these sales from the largest wholesale dealer in foreign and domestic hosiery in the United States.

They are not picked over stock which has travelled thousands of miles and been handled by scores of persons. We make our choice of goods suited to our customers from over 20,000 pairs retained as samples in the New York salesroom. MRS. NORTON AND EIGHT CHILDREN GRIEF-STRICKEN FOR SLAIN OFFICER

CLASS DAY FOR YOUNG DAUGHTER

At the home of Police Inspector Norton, in Dorchester, there was a constant stream of visitors today offering their condolences. There were policemen, inspectors, comrades of the dead man; there were business men, neighbors who knew him, relatives and friends.

Grief gripped the home, and the mother and the eight children either sat in sorrowful silence or gave themselves to bitter grief; all save five-year-old Robert. Too young to understand, he wandered from room to room, tried to play, to draw his elders into laughter.

When he could not, his little lip would droop in pitiful bewilderment.

Inspector Patterson was one of the first visitors today. He was a close friend of the dead man. He spent some time with Mrs. Norton, trying to comfort her.

Sometime late this afternoon the Inspector's body will be taken to his home. The funeral will be held Tuesday at 10 o'clock at St. Mark's Church, and a detail of police inspectors will attend.

WAITED PAPA'S HOME-COMING.

The news of Inspector Norton's death came to his home like a thunderbolt. Olive Norton, twelve years old, dressing for graduation exercises, had just called to her mother:

"Mamma, won't papa be glad to see me?"

"Yes, dear," Mrs. Norton answered. "But hurry and look your prettiest. He'll soon be home."

A few minutes later the door bell of the Norton home rang. Eliot Norton, fourteen, son of Inspector Norton, answered the call.

A taxi cab was outside, the motor chugging madly. Captain Michael Crowley of the Dorchester station was on the doorsteps.

"Hello, Eliot, is mamma busy? Tell her I want to see her right away."

"Mamma, Captain Crowley wants you."

Mrs. Norton dropped everything. Something had happened, otherwise why should Captain Crowley call at that hour.

"Mrs. Norton, will you jump in this car and ride to the Relief Station with me? Tom has been hurt."

Mrs. Norton did so. Captain Crowley has many times carried the news to the homes of loved ones, but never before on such an occasion. When they arrived at the Haymarket Square station it was too late. "Tom" Norton was dead. The victim of a slayer's bullet.

Such was the scene that presented itself at the home of Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton when the news of the shooting was broken to his family.

"Tom" Norton had eight children. He loved them all dearly.

Thursday night one of his daughters, seventeen, graduated from the Dorchester High School and Friday "Tom" Norton was a happy and proud man.

Last night Olive Norton, twelve, was to share in like honors. She was to receive her diploma and graduate from the Hemenway Grammar School.

Less than an hour before the shooting "Tom" had bought flowers for his daughter. The Norton household was happy, the children, all with new clothes, proud of their sister, were eagerly awaiting the arrival of their father when the news was broken to them.

Alice, the eldest daughter, had heard Captain Crowley when he told her mother that she was wanted at the hospital. She barced her nerves, hoping for the best, and continued to assist her sister Olive in dressing.

An hour later, broken hearted, Mrs. Norton returned home. She gently broke the news to Alice. Papa would not see the graduation exercises. He was dead. Duty had called him and in the performance of his oath to "serve and protect" he had given his life.

OLIVE GOES TO GRADUATION.

Eliot, the eldest boy, ran to his mother's side and throwing his arms around her neck begged her to be brave. He was to be the new "daddy." Upon his shoulders was to rest the responsibility of the family.

Bravely he tried to soothe his mother's broken heart.

It was finally agreed that Olive should attend the exercises, and when her classmates, all attired in their pretty white dresses, rang the bell she threw a cape over her shoulders, dried her tears and went to school. There matters were explained, there she broke down and, with her diploma in hand, ran back home, long before the exercises began.

The children sang their class song. The seat assigned to Olive was vacant, and it was with a faltering heart that the head master delivered his address. Few persons missed Olive, but the class did, and their voices told as they sang, and their expressions showed their thoughts as they spoke.

Something not on the program had happened, and it was not long before the audience realized it.

While Olive was on her way to the exercises Mrs. Norton called in little Albert, five, who had been playing in the yard with his playmates, and gathering the rest of her family, Alice, Elmer, eleven, Mildred, nine, and Lincoln, eight, broke the news of their father's death.

WAS A LOVING FATHER.

Neighbors called and did the best they could to console the family. Motherly women took care of the children, told the boys of their father's bravery, prepared a supper for them and put them to bed.

It was not the same home.

"Tom" Norton alway wore a smile. He loved his children and they loved him; he was an ideal father and husband.

His home-coming at night was always awaited with much interest by his children. They ran to the corner to greet him, they grabbed his hands and played with him. Little Albert was always first to see papa and oftentimes, after a hard day's work, "Tom" lifted Albert to his shoulder and gave him a "pig-a-back" way up to the steps.

The greeting did not occur last night. Albert did not get his pig-a-back, a fond, loving wife was there to implant a kiss on her husband's lips, daughters dressed in their graduating gowns were there, but not "Tom" Norton.

He had paid the price of the duty of a policeman.

SLAYER, PICTURESQE PICTURE IN CRIME

Lawrence Robinson, murderer of Inspector Norton, was as picturesque a character as a criminal of fiction. He had been in Boston for some time, living at the Commonwealth Hotel in luxurious quarters, and with a wardrobe that would have made Beau Brummel green with envy.

He was a man six feet tall, with a ruddy complexion and red hair. His manner was pleasing and his conversation delightful. He appeared cultured, well informed and anxious to make friends.

He studied tango dancing at the dancing academy in Howe Hall, Huntington avenue, conducted by Mrs. Helen Sweney. He said he was studying dancing so that he might be at ease at the Summer hotel to which he planned to go for the vacation season.

Mr. Sweney—Charles H. Sweney of No. 221 Beach street, Revere, had advised his going to the Kineo House, and Robinson apparently thought well of the suggestion.

WOOED REVERE GIRL.

During his stay at the Commonwealth Hotel he tipped lavishly, hired automobiles frequently, went on trips to the automobile resorts about Greater Boston, occasionally visited the dance halls, and wooed a Revere girl with the utmost devotion.

He was registered at the Commonwealth Hotel under the name of George Spencer. When the police searched his rooms they found costly clothes, fine linen, silk ties and socks and all the aparel of a gentleman of leisure.

Joseph Duddy, who went under the alias of Joseph Daniels, and whom the police hold for murder as Robinson's "pal," also stayed at the Commonwealth. A telegram was found on file there from Mineapolis, which read as follows:

Minneapolis, Minn., June 12, 1914.
J. W. Daniels—Try principal hotels. Try Commonwealth Hotel, Boston. Trunk found at White Bear forwarded. Immediately Taft Hotel, Adams Ex.
(Sgd.) SHREVE ARCHER, 3:30 P. M.

The police are wondering whether this telegram, if traced back, would lead to the recovery of the trunk and information regarding the movements of the pair before coming to Boston.

Charles H. Sweney, husband of Mrs. Sweney, who taught Robinson the tango, said today in discussing his acquaintance with the man:

WELL BRED MAN.

"In our estimation, Robinson was a high grade gentleman, nothing less. I never saw a better bred man, and one more perfectly at his ease would be hard to find. He was a wonderful talker, immaculate in dress but never flashy, and not of the sort that likes to flash a lot of money.

"I never saw him show more than a $5 bill at a time. I know he carried a good deal of money, however. It was in a secret pocket pinned inside of his vest.

"We often dined together. He was a lavish spender. I remember one occasion, when I paid the check, and he said: 'Charlie, I want to come across with something. Let's take an auto ride,' so we went for an auto ride into the country.

"I met Robinson at the dancing classes. He made a fine impression there. He told me he was a building estimatorr. He seemed to know Boston thoroughly.

"He told me he was learning dancing so that he could go to some swell hotel during the Summer, and he asked me to advise him where to go.

WAS VERY POPULAR.

"I advised him to go to the Kineo House, at Mt. Kineo, Me. I told him what sort of a place it was, and he liked the idea. He wanted to know the new dances, so as to be able to go to the functions there.

"I never suspected him of being anything else than what he represented himself to be. He met many people here, and so far as I know everybody liked him. He was a typical Westerner, big and calm and strong. I was not surprised to hear what a fight he put up, for I happened to have occasion to see how strong he was.

"It was one day when he did wear a sut that was a little startling, and a bright tie. It was so unusual that I joked him about it. I said something or other, and he laughed and put out one hand and gave me a shove. I went sprawling.

"I was like a baby in his hands."

Mrs. Sweney said that her impression of the man had been much the same as that her husband received.

"He came to me," she said, "and paid in advance for his lessons. It is not true that I bought diamond rings from him. I never saw him have any rings save one on the little finger of his hand. That one, I understand, the police regard as evidence.

"He was quick to learn the dancing steps and was soon an adept. He made a hit with all the girls. They were all eager to dance with him. Of late, he had been a great help to us—practically an assistant in our teaching. We often joked about taking his money when he was really doing as much work as we were.

"Miss Eva Mundy was our pianist here. He often praised her playing. She is a young woman of a very high character, with the very finest kind of friends.

"Also, she is a clever dancer, and once in a while she would be relieved at the piano and would dance a while. On these occasions Mr. Robinson—or Spencer, as we knew him, always sought to dance with her. They were a pretty couple, fine dancers, both.

"Their friendship became very strong. More than once, I believe, he took her to her home in Revere after the dancing. Once or twice he drove with us in our automobile.

"He was a good spender, but he never overspent. He hated crowds, didn't like the limelight. But people naturally came to him.

"PERFECT GENTLEMAN."

"Of course, a thing like this is not good for my business. We took him as he was—as a refined, educated gentleman. He never did a thing to make us think him anything else."

Miss Eva Mundy, the girl referred to, lives at No. 2 Belvedere square, Revere. A woman there said:

"Mr. Robinson—or Mr. Spencer—has been here three or four times with Eva. He was always a perfect gentleman, always attentive, ingratiating and anxious to please.

"It was the shock of our lives to know this about him.

"He was a highly entertaining man, told about his travels all over this country and seemed well educated.

"He was quite musical, had a fine voice, and always played or sang for us. Sometimes he and Eva played duets on the piano.

"He always left early. Eva liked him, as we all did, but no more than she liked many other young men."

"TOM" NORTON GAME

Hospital Doctor's Tribute

IN PAIN, DIDN'T FALTER

"Inspector Norton was one of the bravest men who ever lay on an operating table," said Dr. Murphy of the Haymarket Square Relief Station today in commenting on the strength "Tom" Norton displayed when he arrived at the hospital.

"He was conscious when he arrived and lived twenty-four minutes. He said he was suffering intense agony, but didn't falter. He was only unconscious nine minutes. The bullet entered the abdomen slightly on the left side, under the heart and tore through the muscles and tissues, coming out at the back. The bullet went clean through his body," he said.

Principals in Boston's Sensational Shooting

INSPECTOR THOMAS J. NORTON.

Inspector Norton was fifty-four years old, married and the father of eight children. He lived on Mather street, Dorchester. Appointed to the police force June 8, 1897, and assigned to Station 3. Appointed a sergeant in 1907 and the year following transferred to headquarters as an inspector. He had been twice under fire before, once in the roundup of bandits at Forest Hills in July, 1908, and previously in the arrest of a gang of safe-blowers on Washington street in 1907.

LAWRENCE ROBINSON.

Lawrence Robinson, alias George Roberts, Albert Adams, George Spencer, "Chippy" Robinson, Walter E. Spencer, Albert Scott and Harry Burton. Home is in Courthouse, Ohio, thirty-two years old, a carpenter by trade, professional bad man, pickpocket, highwayman and robber. Thirty-two years old, a former cowboy, handy with a gun, a good spender, gambler and general all-around thief and sport.

JOSEPH DANIELS.

Joseph Daniels, alias Duddy, a pickpocket. He is twenty years old, his home is in Pittsburgh. The police are investigating his career.

COMRADES WEEP AT DEATH OF NORTON

Brave police inspectors, men who daily face hardened criminals, men who have often been in much the same predicament as "Tom" Norton was, wept when the news of their comrade's death reached police headquarters.

"Al" Douglass, who is in charge at nights, and who had travelled with Norton, had just reported for duty when the news that "Tom" had passed away reached headquarters. Douglass answered the telephone with a faltering voice.

When inspectors on special work reported at the usual time inquiring if there was anything doing "Al" broke the news, hung up the receiver and sat down.

Another close friend of "Tom" Norton was Inspector Jim Dennessey. Dennessey was with his comrade when he died. Of the older men, Michael Shields, Michael Morrissey, Captain Armstrong, Levi Burr, "Doc" Smith and George Patterson, the latter two having been paired with Norton at various times, donned their hats and coats and left.

When a police inspector, who is naturally hardened to such things, feels as the men at headquarters did last night, it is evident that "Tom" was loved and admired.

"No better man ever lived. He was a prince, a good fellow," were some of the tributes paid to "Tom" Norton by those who knew him.

RED AND WHITE SOX MEET IN ODD GAME OF BIG SERIES TODAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

BRAVES BATTLE HARD TO CAPTURE "RUBBER" FROM THE CARDINALS

Bringing Up Father (In England)

RED AND WHITE SOX IN BATTLE FOR ODD GAME

CHICAGO, June 20.—It is a battle for the odd game between the Red Sox and those who wear the socks of White today.

This for the reason, that while the men of Carrigan whaled those of Callahan in the first game, they couldn't repeat. The Chicago lads took the second game, 3 to 2.

That made the series stand one all, which means a desperate battle this afternoon.

Carrigan got the impression that the South Siders were easy for a left-hander. He must have secured that impression, because the Chicago lads couldn't find Dutch Leonard in the first game.

He came right back with Ray Collins. This port sider wasn't a mystery at all. The Chicago lads, never accounted sluggers, lambasted him for eleven safe drives.

SPEAKER BACK IN STRIDE

Two left-handers in a row is crowding things a bit. It's likely that Carrigan will shift to his right-hand twirlers this afternoon.

Joe Wood is his his first choice, while Reb Russell, who is a left-hander, will try to fool the Boston lads.

The White Sox figure they are the victims of ill luck. Tris Speaker is hitting. When the Boston lads landed here they were bewailing that their champion slugger wasn't connecting with the ball. But you don't hear them complain now.

In the first game Tris drove out a pair of hits, and while his pals got but five off Benz in the second, the centrefielder was present with one. It was a three-base drive to right, and the squeeze play, with Lewis bunting, put him across.

CARRIGAN HAD HARD DAY.

Manager Bill Carrigan was the sore athlete during the game. There was a high wind blowing, and the Chicago Sox insisted upon hitting high fouls. The manager went after two, and he was lucky to escape with his life. The wind would catch them, blow them this way and that, and upon one occasion one of the fouls barely missed the managerial head.

Manager Bill had a lovely time all right. And the further he missed them the louder did the fans howl, and the sorer did the Boss get.

STEVE FARRELL, ATHLETIC COACH OF the University of Michigan, has the same situation to face as that of Harry Hillman of Dartmouth. Farrell loses much of his varsity material, but like the Green coach he is favored with incoming stars from the freshman class.

HUGH M'GRATH IS ANXIOUS TO SEE more open meets in the Summer. Hugh has been identified with the local track game for years, and with his brother Frank, official handicapper, occupies a high place in amateur athletics in this district.

WHEN TELL BERNA, THE FORMER Cornell runner, made his record of 9 minutes 17 4-5 seconds in the two-mile race held at the Penn-Cornell meet two years ago, he underwent preliminary work that seldom falls to the lot of a runner out to establish a new mark. Berna's home is in Ithaca, and on the morning of the race his parents requested that he beat carpets. Tell beat them, and despite the distributing experience he went through, was able to go out and break an American record in the afternoon.

* * *

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION FROM the West, Steve Farrell of Michigan will gain O'Brien from the freshman class, who has a mark of 9 4-5 for the dash. Wilson, a pole vaulter, has done 12 feet, while Herrick and Burbey are promising quarter-milers.

NEW YORK EXPERTS ARE STRONG ON the boost for Lawson Robertson to coach the next American Olympic team. Robertson was a big aid to Mike Murphy at the last Olympics, and if Jack Moakley of Cornell, the logical man for the position, decides to pass up the invitation it looks as if the Irish-American trainer stood a good chance to land it.

* * *

CAPTAIN PAUL PILGRIM OF THE NEW York A. C. has entered sixty men in the junior championship to be held at Travers Island this afternoon. The Irish-American A. A. has entered fifty-five men.

NEW YORK TRACK FOLLOWERS ARE sore over the fact that so many stars were advertised to start in the Mayo Mile at Celtic Park last Sunday, and but few good men appeared for the start. There were 5,000 fans on hand.

PAT DWYER, coach of the University of Louisiana, has been named to succeed the late Mike Murphy as coach of the University of Pennsylvania track team.

THIRTY THOUSAND ENTRY BLANKS have been issued to the schools, church associations, settlements and clubs for the New York City safe and sane Fourth of July celebration to be held on the forty playgrounds and athletic fields throughout the five New York boroughs.

OLD-TIME RUNNERS HAVE THEIR once-a-week reunions downtown. Prominent among them are Pooch Donovan, Bob Brown, Sam Ward, Leo Sullivan, Jack Scanlon and Johnnie Maloney. When Steve Farrell gets East and Keene Fitzpatrick and Johnny Mack return from their colleges they will join the group.

BILLY GRIMES IS AT HULL FOR THE Summer. Billy will help out on the big athletic program which the town provides for its gala day in August.

THE RECEPTION TENDERED JOHN O'Reilly by the students at Dorchester High was deserved. The veteran coach went to Dorchester from English High when track athletics at the former school were practically dead. After a few years there O'Reilly mustered together a team that was feared by the other Boston schools.

LARRY SWEENEY SAYS THE TEN-MILE race he has arranged between Jimmy Duffy, the Marathon winner, and the best of the local runners should be a thrilling contest. Larry has been in the track game for years as an expert and knows what he is talking about.

JAMES PICKED TO BEAT CARDS IN ODD GAME

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

It is horse and horse between the Braves and Cardinals. Thus, with honors even, the two teams will line up again for a Saturday game at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The Cards have shown their gameness and so have the Braves. Both teams are fighters and, barring the dilatory tactics of the visitors, the two battles already fought have been of a most exciting finish.

In all probability Manager Stallings will send Bill James to the hill this afternoon. James finished up yesterday's game, but as he only pitched one inning, this would not prove an obstacle in the way of his going back at the Cards this afternoon. Otto Hess is also ready to take a turn and if the weather is warm the Braves' boss may decide to use him.

For the Cardinals it will be "Slim" Sallee or "Polly" Perritt, while there is also a chance that Doak may be sent after the game. Sallee has finished up in both of the games played so far, and filled out the pinch role in an admirable manner.

President Fogarty of the Jersey City club, who has been meandering around these parts in search of players for the past few days, has finally been granted his wish. Manager Stallings has turned over the Cuban pitcher, Luque, to Fogarty, under the conditions that he can be recalled at a moment's notice. Luque is a fairly good moundsman and should win many games in the International League.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

THE YANKEES ARE SKIDDING DANgerously close to that cellar position which they occupied during the greater part of last season.

* * *

FOSTER OF THE RED SOX AND TESREAU of the Giants are among the prominent wielders of the whitewash brush in the two major leagues. Each has scored five shutouts.

* * *

THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE WHITE Sox pitchers vanished suddenly when the Athletics and Red Sox began to wave their bats. The Macklan artillery has always been the cure for too good pitching.

* * *

FOUR YEARS AGO, WHEN CHICK GANdil was sent to Montreal from the White Sox, he contended that the club owed him $200. Three times the National Commission denied the claim. Several days ago Gandil, who had practically given up hope of getting the money, called on President Comiskey to get a photograph. Before leaving the office Commy had a check drawn for $200, and he handed it to Gandil.

* * *

MANY NEW NAMES HAVE BEEN ADDED to the list of great college players during the season, now drawing to a close. Pitcher Neyland of West Point has been one of the most notable performers.

* * *

EITHER DAN MURPHY'S BATTING EYE is as good as ever, or the pitching in the Federal League is especially soft. The veteran is pounding the ball as hard and as often as at any time in his career.

* * *

PICKING A THIRD BASEMAN FOR THE Giants was a steady occupation before the season opened. Then McGraw made his selection, and Stock's work has more than vindicated the judgment of the Giants' leader.

* * *

THE ST. LOUIS FEDS, EASILY CARRY off the honors for overcoming a big lead with a twelfth inning rally. They needed seven runs to beat the Brookfeds, so they picked up eight. This game comes close to a record in number of runs scored in an extra inning.

* * *

THE ST. LOUIS CARDINALS HAVE A very nimble first baseman named Dressen in case Jack Miller is out of the game. Dressen may not be much of a batsman, but he handles himself like a veteran at first base.

* * *

HONUS WAGNER WENT THROUGH THE four games in New York without getting a hit. The Giant pitchers had his number, but not so with Gibson. The catcher made six hits in eleven times up.

* * *

THE WASHINGTONS HAVE LOST NINE out of twelve games in the West. The Red Sox and Athletics are doing the winning for the Eastern contingent.

* * *

BROOKLYN IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE ONE of the heaviest batting arrays in the National League, but batting evidently isn't the whole works.

* * *

THE BALTIMORE FEDERALS HAVE been tumbled out of first place. The Chifeds have become the pacemakers.

* * *

IT IS SAID THE FEDERAL LEAGUE IS trying to lure Larry McLean and Jack Murray away from the Giants.

Eagan Beats Glover in Cambridge Bout

Joe Eagan of South Boston, lightweight, defeated Johnny Glover of South Boston in their twelve-round bout at the University A. C.

Jack Read of Australia was to have met Eagan, but there was a dispute about the weight and Glover was substituted.

Dave Powers stopped Larry Conselo in two rounds. Johnny Noonan got the award over Frankie Barret in six rounds. Gardner Brooks of Lowell won the decision from Barney Snyder of Roxbury.

TWO FEATURE RACES ON CARD FOR BIKE FANS

RACING PROGRAM.

Sprint race (2 in 3), Bob Spears of Australia vs. Iver Lawson.

Motor-paced race (3 ten-mile heats, best two in three), Leon Didier, France, vs. Clarence Carman, Jamaica.

Two-mile amateur handicap, Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open for amateurs, one-mile invitation for amateurs, one-mile professional and three novice events.

Two feature races, a motor-paced and a special sprint match, are on the card for the bike fans at the Revere cycle track tonight. The sprint match will introduce Bob Spears, the Australian star, who will meet Iver Lawson, while the motor-paced race brings together Clarence Carman of Jamaica and Leon Didier of France.

The last meeting of the motor-paced rivals at the beach oval was marred by an accident to Didier in the second mile and, although he finished the race, it is believed the toss greatly impaired his chances and it was at his request as well as a large number of fans that tonight's race was arranged.

With Wiley out temporarily owing to injuries, Carman and Didier are the best pair of machine men in the game. Both are speedy and strong riders and the ten-mile record which Carman holds at present is in danger.

Great interest is also being shown in the sprint match between Spears and Lawson. Since his return to the game recently, Lawson has been traveling the mile in fast time.

Spears has never ridden here before but Newark reports say he is a crackerjack, and the fact that he worked his way into the finals of the grand prize of Newark races, while Jackie Clarke and other stars were shut out in the preliminary heats, testifies to his speed.

The fact that the Boston and Providence riders have banded together to beat each other should furnish some unusual competition in the professional, amateur and novice events.

Baseball Magnates Hold Session Today

NEW YORK, June 20.—The meeting of the National Commission that was scheduled to take place at the Waldorf Astoria didn't materialize for some unknown reason.

President Tener of the National League and Garry Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, were at the Waldorf, but Ban Johnson failed to put in an appearance, and it was announced that the meeting had been postponed until today.

Rosenberger Stars at New York Games

NEW YORK, June 20.—Jim Rosenberger, of the Irish American A. C., carried off the honors at the games of the Metropolitan Life Insurance A. A. at Celtic Park, winning the 100-yard dash from scratch in clever style. His great speed in the half mile relay enabled his team to capture the event.

Heavy Weather May Hold Up Shamrock Trial

GOSPORT, Eng., June 20.—The Shamrock IV's alterations having been completed it was intended to get her under way yesterday, but the tide in the morning did not rise sufficiently high to float her.

Owing to the change in her rig she has a lot of new gear to stretch and it was hoped to have done this yesterday so that a formal race could have been sailed today, but under the conditions the idea of sailing an actual race today may have to be abandoned unless the weather continues light, as it has been for the last day or so.

The new bowsprit of the yacht is sixteen feet out board. This gives about fifty feet of base in the fore triangle, and the spinnaker will be correspondingly increased. This would improve her immensely down the wind in light airs.

Her forestay comes down on deck about eight feet in board, but until she is afloat it is impossible to see what difference in her trim or water line length the removal of the fore part of her lead had made.

New Weight System for Olympic Boxers

PARIS, June 20.—After a lively discussion on the question of boxing competitions at the Olympic games to be held in Berlin of the International Olympic Congress. The subcommittee's report was adopted, providing that the weights of the contestants be taken in kilograms, and reducing the number of classes of boxers to six instead of the original eight.

It was decided to create an international boxing federation to control amateur contests, the first session to be held in London in 1915.

Kinsella May Go After Gould's Title

Jay Gould, court tennis champion of the world, may be called upon to defend his title next year. It is said Walter Kinsella, professional of the Squash Club of New York, may challenge the champion if he can dispose of several English contenders.

In England recently, Kinsella won fourteen out of fifteen matches against British professionals, losing the other match only after allowing his opponent a handicap.

ASCOT, Eng., June 20.—Mount William, belonging to R. J. Garquharsons, won the Wokingham stakes, a six furlong sprint, valued at $5,000. C. Hubert's Mercutio was second, and W. Raphael's Lord Annandale was third. There were 24 starters.

BRITTON HURLS CHALLENGE AT N. E. RING MEN

By JACK CONWAY.

"DUMB" DAN MORGAN is still residing on this planet. We were almost led to believe that Danny had passed beyond the great divide, for he has been rather tardy in sending out lengthy statements of late, in which he claims championship titles for his boxers. The month of June was half over and Morgan had not come to bat with a single challenge in behalf of one of his brave gladiators.

But alas, he was only playing a little joke on us and in the first mail this a. m. we received a letter which did Daniel proud. His missive was in the interest of Jack Britton, one of his most consistent bread winners. The talkative gentleman, who sometimes carefully forgets cold blooded facts in order to boost the ring stock of those glove men under his management, stated that he was eager to have Britton perform in a bout in this city. He also advanced the information that there is not a New England lightweight who is willing to exchange blows with the Chicago ring wizard.

MORGAN'S letter makes very good reading. He is blessed with a rather extensive vocabulary, while he is an expert when it comes to putting periods and commas in the right place. But unless we are very much mistaken there are several young men who reside in these parts who have not any objection to meeting Britton within the hemp ropes.

When Matty Baldwin, Charlestown's best bet in the boxing game, was told that Britton was desirous of showing here he expressed himself thusly:

"If Britton is really anxious to fight I will gladly accommodate him. He is a fine boxer, but I am sure that I would be able to defeat him.

"BRITTON claims that he is a regular big league lightweight, but he seldom reduces to the lightweight limit of 133 pounds. Therefore, I suppose that if I were to box him the weight for the contest would have to be 133 pounds. I am willing to meet the Chicago man at this weight provided he weighs in at 6 o'clock on the day of the contest."

BALDWIN is not what is termed a ring phantom, but he has a habit of holding his own with the skillful mitt men. Johnny Dundee is a remarkably fine boxer, but Matty nevertheless held him to a draw. The little New York Italian stated when he was in Boston the first of the week that Baldwin is one of the best ring generals in the lightweight class, and that his knowledge of the fine points of the boxing game enable him to hold his own with the leading boys in his division.

ALEX M'LEAN, manager of Gilbert Gallant, declares he will not have any objections to pitting the Chelsea boy against Britton, provided he wins from Eddie Murphy at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. And in McLean's opinion Gallant will conquer Murphy. In discussing the matter today he said:

"When Murphy and Gallant fought a year ago, the South Boston boxer won. Gallant, however, was fighting strong in the latter part of the tussle, and could have fought eight sessions more if it were necessary.

"GALLANT was an inexperienced boxer when he lost to Murphy. He was young, strong and ambitious, but had only engaged in a few important contests. Since losing to Murphy, Gallant has gained a wealth of experience, and has improved at least 40 per cent., while I do not believe Murphy is a bit better fighter today than he was a year ago. Gill made a grand showing in his bouts in California. He fought a twenty-round draw with Frankie Burns, who is a classier boxer than Eddie Murphy. That is one of the reasons why I am confident that he will dispose of Murphy, and in doing so win the lightweight championship of New England."

Proficiency Badges for Foreign Athletes

The method of training for the coming Olympiad adopted by England, Germany and Sweden and the success attending it merits the strict attention from other nations intending to compete.

Proficiency badges and diplomas are given to athletes who pass a test in nine branches of sport. For a candidate to obtain a badge or diploma he must record a standard performance in five of the nine groups.

He makes his choice from the following: Running, field events, boxing, cycling, fencing, gymnastics, with or without apparatus; shooting, swimming or wrestling.

It is obvious that a greater number of persons than will actually be required will obtain these badges, and so a system of elimination by contests will be used to bring the number of athletes down to the representation required.

Stanage Will Boss the Tiger Pitchers

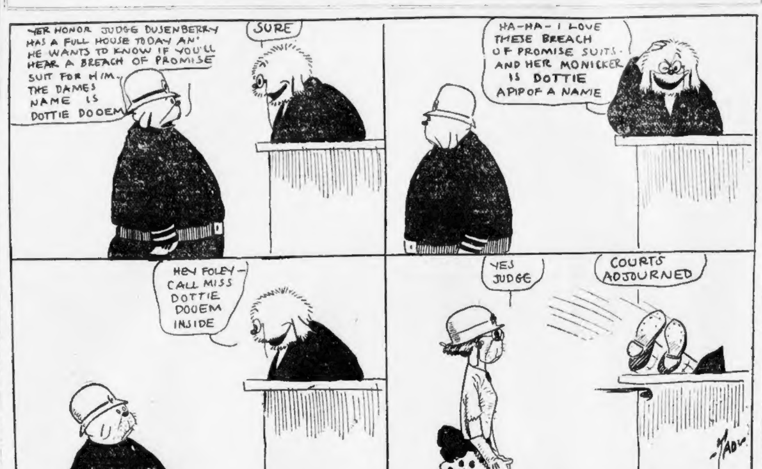

Hughie Jennings, czar of the Tigers, has placed a check on his own powers. Oscar Stanage has been drafted to act as a balance in the government of the Detroit team.

Jennings has put complete control of the pitchers and catchers in the hands of the veteran receiver. No battery man will be sent into a game or taken out except by the order of Stanage.

In explaining the reason for the move Jennings said that in spite of his many years of baseball leadership he himself had never been able to control his temper absolutely, and that he was often over hasty in removing pitchers.

"Oscar Stanage," he continued, "has a percentage of .999 in good humor, and that's why I selected him."

By NICK FLATLEY.

Harvard and Yale, each with a victory, battle today out at Fenway Park for their own particular baseball championship. The game, which starts at 3 o'clock, will, however, mean more than mere supremacy on the diamond.

If Harvard wins the annual athletic battle between the two great universities will be a draw. Yale won in track and on the river, Harvard at football. A victory for Yale will mean that the tide of fortune, for some moons past Crimson in flow, has at last turned toward New Haven and the Yale sport revival is an actuality.

This fact, consequently, will send the two teams into the game more determined than ever to come out in front.

From every angle, the game should be a sizzler. Both teams are imbued with the greatest confidence. The members of each aggregation believe that the game they dropped to the other outfit was more or less a matter of luck.

Such being the case, with the historic rivalry and the aforementioned chance to fix up accounts for the entire year thrown in for good measure, the contest sizes up like the biggest thing that has been staged at Fenway Park in the line of the national pastime since those happy days, a few years back, when the well-known muff of an individual named Snodgrass and a few other happy contributing causes made the Red Sox band champions of the world.

BIG CROWD WILL WATCH.

Likewise, a great crowd will witness the collegiate heroes have it out. For the first time in a generation or so, Boston is offered the chance to have a peek at the final diamond tussle of the Blue and the Crimson.

Society, at least that part of it that makes college affairs a hobby, will be out en masse. Also the hoi polloi—that part of the population not blessed or burdened, as the case may be, with the higher academic education—will snap at the chance to have a look at one of the big games that in times past they have perforce been content to read about.

The boat race crowd from New London swarmed into Boston last night and will be represented very strong numerically. The colors that did duty along the banks of the placid Thames will be used to fill a double roll and help brighten the complexion of affairs in the big stands at the Fenway ball yard.

Both teams took a light workout on the Carrigan pasture yesterday afternoon and the two sets of infielders seemed to have very little trouble getting on to the hang of the somewhat faster diamond that big leaguers are wont to cavort about.

MAHAN AGAINST WAY.

Eddie Mahan for Harvard and "Pie" Way for Yale will probably be picked to start on the hurling hill. Each has won a game from the hated rival, the Crimson footballer by the score of 7-3 on Bunker Hill Day and the gentleman with the pastry nickname, on the day preceding at New Haven, the figures in that case being 6-1.

The Cambridge athlete allowed five hits on his successful essay, while the Eli youngster was dented safely but four times by Harvard's aggregation of sluggers. So, as has been mentioned, with the pair working according to schedule, the resulting conflict should be worth watching.

POSITIONS FALL

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

TIME of game—two hours and forty-seven minutes. Umpires—Quigley and Eason.

This beats Thursday's record, established by Messrs. Orth and Byron, umpires, at the South End grounds, by about ten minutes. There are two more games to be played in the series between the Braves and Cards, and there is hope that the officials can yet work in a three-hour matinee.

* * *

BUT the crowd stayed to the end. It couldn't be helped, under the circumstances. One doesn't see the kind of game-end rallies made by the two teams every ball day.

* * *

IN the first place, cold molasses has Griner beaten a city block in the way of speed.

Shades of George Cuppy, how slow that fellow Griner is! And just to make the game longer, Huggins has a habit of walking to the box to admonish the pitcher whenever there is a called ball. Huggins must walk somewhere near five miles more than is necessary in a game of ball.

* * *

IN the second place, the Cards kept up their kicking tactics, and just to show that the visitors had no mortgage on the kicking proposition and also to show that he hadn't forgotton how to kick, Johnny Evers kicked himself out of the game toward the last. Huggins was canned about the same time, so honors were about even on the day.

* * *

UMPIRES EASON and Quigley would do well to call the captains of the teams before them at the start of today's game and deliver themselves somewhat as follows:

"We want you gentlemen to understand that we will allow no kicking on decisions today. Every man that protests against a decision will be put out of the game without further warning."

* * *

IF it hadn't been for those eighth inning rallies, the game would have been spoiled for everybody. It is time the umpires did something to keep the players in check.

* * *

LET us briefly chronicle that eighth inning at the old park. It was one calculated to promote heart disease.

The score stood 3 to 1 in favor of the Braves when the Cards took their turn at bat to begin the eighth. Rudolph was pitching, and up to that round the Cards had made only five hits off his delivery.

* * *

DOLAN slapped a single to the left of Maranville, and with two strikes on, Miller stole second. The decision was close and Evers kicked so hard he was banished from the game. It took all of five minutes before Johnny left the field. He had been spiked on the foot by Dolan and took off his shoe and walked around for some time, one shoe on and one shoe off.

When the game was resumed, Rudolph tried to inveigle Miller into going after a bad one for a third strike, but Miller waited, and with "three and two" on him he swung at a ball that Rudolph grooved and pasted it into the centre field bleachers. The ball bounced out again, but it was allowed as a home run. This tied the score.

* * *

WILSON stepped to the plate and Rudolph, thinking to catch him off his guard before he was ready, tossed a ball straight over the plate with nothing on it. Wilson sprung to life and met the ball squarely with his bat, driving it high over the right field fence for another homer. Butler was retired on a grounder, and Snyder fanned, but Beck came along with a three-base drive to the centre field fence and a moment later scored on Griner' single.

* * *

HUGGINS followed with a Texas Leaguer to right, and Griner took third. Then, on an attempted double steal Griner was nipped at the plate. Four runs had come in and Rudolph had been touched up for two home runs, a triple and two singles in the round.

* * *

IT looked a hopeless case for the Braves, but they are game. Maranville led off with a fine two-bagger to the right-field fence. Griner was promptly yanked from the box and Slim Sallee stalked out to take his place. Smith rapped a hard one over second, and the Rabbit scurried home.

* * *

DEAL bunted and Sallee attempted to nip Schmidt at second. The Butcher went crashing into the bag about the same time the ball arrived and was declared safe. Huggins set up such a roar that he was also ordered off the field by Umpire Eason. Mann bunted to Sallee and was out at first, but the runners advanced.

* * *

WHALING came through with his third safe hit, scoring both runners. Murray, batting for Rudolph, poked a safe one to centre. Gilbert struck out, but Martin, batting for Evers, drew a pass, filling the bases.

Gowdy then batted for Connolly and allowed himself to be soaked with a pitched ball, forcing in the fourth run. The Rabbit, batting for the second time in the round, grounded out.

James pitched the ninth and shut out the Cards. It was a most exciting finish.

* * *

PITCHER SCHULZ'S jump to the Feds also shows that player up in a bad light. He lives near Detroit and he traveled at the expense of the New York Americans until he reached Detroit, when he packed his grip and beat it to his home, thereby saving train fare. He had his clothes pressed before departing and left the bill for the club to pay.

* * *

WITH all the protests against umpires coming in hand over fist, President Tener is getting a taste of what previous executives of the National League had to put up with. Harry Pulliam was driven to take his own life because of the unreasonable demands and protests on the part of owners and managers. Heydler, who succeeded him, also had his troubles in the same line. Tom Lynch's life was made a burden to him by the kicks and squabbles of club owners and managers, and the protests that flooded his mail were frightful to see.

* * *

TENER is getting his share now, but he proposes to put a stop to it and if he succeeds he will have done what no other National League president has succeeded in doing.

Tener is strongly opposed to protests by managers and club owners on the work of the umpires, and in this he has the backing of baseball patrons in general. This unsportsmanlike practice has prevailed in the National League for many years, but the Governor is going to stop it if he can.

If a club official brings charges reflecting on the integrity of an umpire which he cannot prove, he will be compelled to withdraw from organized baseball.

If, on the other hand, an umpire is shown to be incompetent the umpire will be released forthwith. Clean baseball is demanded by the public, and the public does not take kindly to senseless protests against umpires.

HERRICK CREW OFF TODAY FOR LONDON RACES

BOAT RACE RESULTS.

Varsity eights, won by Yale by 1-5 second.

Freshman eights won by Harvard by four lengths.

Second varsity eights, won by Harvard by seven lengths.

With the big Harvard-Yale boat races over chief interest today centred in the ball game between the college rivals at Fenway Park, which will decide the championship.

The real distance and time by which the Yale varsity won is still a question, the New Haven reports giving the space between the crews as anywhere from five inches to a foot.

The election of crew captains was held immediately after the races. The Yale oarsmen accorded Captain Thomas B. Denegre of the victorious blue, a leader without a place in the boat which made history for Yale, a unanimous re-election as leader of the 1915 crew.

It was a tribute to the self-sacrifice of the captain, who had given up his seat that a stronger man might pull a formidable oar.

The Harvard oarsmen selected H. O. Murray of New York. He rowed at No. 7 in the big race.

Coach Herrick and his victorious second varsity crew sail today on the Olympic from New York for England and the Henley regatta. The crew has received an invitation to row in a German regatta on July 16.

Sunday Baseball Game in Orange to Test the Law

NEW HAVEN, June 20.—Baseball will be played at Savin Rock in the adjoining town of Orange tomorrow by transfer of the Springfield-New Haven game in the Eastern Association schedule from Lighthouse Point. It was agreed that Sunday baseball would be stopped at the latter resort, which is within the city limits.

Backers of baseball expect a test case over the prospective games.

EXPERTS AGREE THAT HARVARD WAS TOO SURE

By FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW LONDON, June 20.—Over-confidence on the part of the Harvard oarsmen caused their defeat by Yale in the big varsity race in the opinion of rowing experts.

The Crimson oarsmen figured that there was no real driving power in the Yale crew; figured that they could stroke along at an easy clip until near the finish line and then repeat the performance of other years—spurting and leaving Yale far behind. But it was a different story this year.

The Harvard crew started the race stroking around twenty-seven and then hit it up to thirty at the mile. From then on until after the third mile was passed they dropped their stroke below thirty and contented themselves with letting the boat ride along after each long stroke. This enabled Yale to keep alongside almost all the way to the three-mile post.

And then came the call for the final spurt for the Harvard—the call that the Crimson supporters and the Crimson oarsmen had figured would shoot the Harvard shell across the line an easy victor. But Harvard figured wrong.

The easy pace Harvard had set all the way up to the three-mile post had been easy for Yale to follow. It left the Eli gang fresh and strong for that wonderful spurt that shot them over the line, in the opinion of the judges, a scant three feet ahead of Harvard.

Had Harvard pursued the tactics of other years—jumping to the front and grabbing off a big lead—Harvard would have won undoubtedly. But Harvard this year seemed so confident of beating Yale that it wanted to do a little grand stand playing; wanted to give the spectators a thrill at the finish by letting Yale keep alongside until near the end and only then jumping ahead and winning out. But the judges ruled that Yale won.

THOUGHT HARVARD HAD WON.

The judges, in ruling that Yale won the race, were practically alone in their decision. Today there are hundreds of persons who were on shore opposite the finish line, and no farther away from the boats than the judges, who declare that Harvard, not Yale, won the race.

Every newspaperman on shore, who was watching the whirlwind finish, was of the opinion that Harvard won by about a foot. When the boats shot over the line it was the Harvard supporters and not the Yale men who let out howls of joy.

BOTH FLAGS DROPPED.

And then came the confusion caused by the dropping of both flags on the judges boat. The rule is that the flag of the winning boat is dropped first. Just as the boat crossed the finish line both flags were dropped. No one on shore, because of the simultaneous dropping of the flags, could be sure at once which boat had won in the opinion of the judges. However, about a minute after the race was over some on the judges boat began to wave the blue flag of Yale and then only did it begin to grow on the crowd that Yale had won.

Vardon Now Six Times Winner of British Golf Title

PRESTWICK, June 20.—Harry Vardon of South Hertfordshire, England, for the sixth time, has won the British open golf championship.

Vardon's aggregate for the 72 holes was 306 strokes. He made the first round in 73, the second in 77, the third in 78 and the fourth in 78.

The new champion won the title for the first time in 1896, when he was twenty-six years old. He followed this up by taking it again in 1898, 1899, 1903 and 1911.

Francis Ouimet, open champion of the United States, made a poor showing. He finished with an aggregate of 332 and was not among the first fifty of the competitors.

He took 86 strokes for the first round, 79 for the second, 85 for the third and 82 for the last.

Recognizing the hopelessness of his position in the contest, Ouimet showed little interest in the final round.

French Girl of 15 Wins World's Title

PARIS, June 20.—Mlle. Langlan, a fifteen-year-old French girl, won the women's hard court tennis world's championship under the auspices of the International Lawn Tennis Federation.

GRAND ANNUAL COUNTRY CLUB RACE FEATURE

The keen competition which marked the second day's meeting of the Country Club racing on the holiday indicates some stiff going when the horses take the post today for the final of the three days' meet at Clyde Park.

Free scratching of horses spoiled the first day's meeting a week ago, but the holiday racing brought out good fields in every race, which is an indication that the owners will send their horses out to get the big purses offered for today's competition.

Seven races are on the card, four of them over the jumps and the remaining three on the dirt track.

Twelve horses are entered in the Country Club grand annual steeplechase over the full distance of two and one-half miles.

Another fine event on the card is the National Hunt Cup steeplechase, with twelve horses entered.

In this event three of the best hunters in the sport are entered, with Gold Plate asked to shoulder 178 pounds, allowing four to Herculoid and thirteen to Cherry Malotte.

These three should make the going, though Dullcars, Lampblack and Free and Easy may prove dangerous.

Between Rounds

By RINGSIDE.

AL M'COY'S ONE-ROUND KNOCKOUT victory over George Chip some time ago must have been pretty much of a lucky punch. The Brooklyn boxer has not shown anything like championship class since that bout, losing two scraps to Billy Murray since that engagement. In his affair against Murray in New York the other night he made a miserable showing, and may be barred from future contests in Gotham.

CHIP TRIED HARD TO GET A RETURN match with McCoy after being stopped, but the latter refused to grant George another chance. Chip, then, left for the Coast, where he has been creating quite a sensation. He stopped Sailor Petroskey, and now is in line for a scrap with Mike Gibbons or Jack Dillon.

GEORGE K. O. BROWN, THE GREEK middleweight, who recently looked in Boston, is tired of fighting over the short route. Brown says he can't get started when fighting ten or twelve rounds and wants to get on with some of the best middles in twenty-round contests. The Greek has fought nearly every middleweight of class, and has never been forced to take the ten count.

CHARLEY WHITE WILL MAKE HIS next fight against Joe Azevedo in San Francisco on July 31. Charley recently bested Azevedo in a ten-round go at Racine, Wis., and should hand the Mexican another lacing. If White beats Azevedo he will stay on the Coast for his pending mix-up with Willie Ritchie on September 9, providing Willie defeats Freddie Welsh on July 4.

DAN M'KETRICK, MANAGER OF FRANK Moran, does not think there is a chance for his protege to lose to Jack Johnson in Paris on June 27. McKetrick writes that Moran is in the very best of shape, and that Johnson, in his present condition, will not be able to stand the pace the Pittsburgher will set for him.

SHOULD MORAN BEAT JOHNSON, GUNboat Smith and Jess Willard will have a hard time getting Moran in the ring. Frank would at once become a big card all over the country and would no doubt spend at least a year picking up the "soft" money before the footlights.

JIM JEFFRIES AND KID M'COY WERE badly fooled in the Williams-Coulon setto in Los Angeles. Both veterans picked Coulon to win over the Baltimore idol.

EDDIE CAMPI, THE COAST BANTAM, IS making good in Philadelphia. Eddie is taking on two opponents a night, for three rounds each, at a Philadelphia playhouse and is well liked by Quaker City fans.

YOUNG SAYLOR, WHO HAS SET AUStralia wild with his fighting, is expected back on these shores before long. Indianapolis, Saylor's home town, wants him to meet some good lightweight on July 4.

WHAT SHOULD BE A CORKING MIDdleweight scrap will be staged in Sydney, New South Wales, on July 4, when Jimmy Clabby and Eddie McGoorty hook up in a twenty-round engagement. McGoorty and Clabby met about three years ago in a twelve-round go at Butte, Mont., Clabby carrying off the decision after being floored twice in the opening round.

NOT MUCH IS HEARD OF BATTLING Levinsky these days. Danny Morgan must be resting his busy boxer for another busy spurt.

BAN JOHNSON WILL BAR ALL THE JUMPERS

NEW YORK, June 20.—Organized baseball will not submit tamely to the loss of those players who desert their employers on ten days notice. Already August Herrmann of the Cincinnati club has begun action for injunctions to restrain Marsans and Davenport from playing with the independents. At the instigation of Ban Johnson, Frank Farrell will proceed immediately in a similar way to prevent the appearance of Heine Schulz with the Buffalo Federals.

"No player who deserts the American League will be allowed to play with the outlaws," said Ban Johnson. "Mr. Farrell's proposed procedure is simplified by the fact that Schulz has gone with a club operating in New York State. It will be very easy to stop him."

"I do not know whether Chase really intends to quit Comiskey," said the Big Czar in answer to a question. "I am told he has notified Charlie that he will be through with the White Sox in a few days. If he does go over to the enemy he will be prosecuted as relentlessly as anybody else. If anybody should have gratitude toward organized baseball, Chase is the man. He was taken back into the fold after he had run out on the New York club in 1908, when Mr. Farrell needed him most. Perhaps it was a bad thing that he wasn't kept out that time when he cast his lot with outlaw baseball. His present behavior has taught me one good lesson. No one who quits my league in this fight will ever get back so long as I am president."

Ban Johnson declares that the story from the West associating Eddie Collins in conferences with Federal League promoters is nothing more than a publicity dodge.

"Collins could not leave Philadelphia till the end of 1915 even if he wished to, which he does not," said Ban. "He is signed to a contract from which the ten days' option of release clause was stricken. For a sum stipulated the Philadelphia club bought an option on Collins' services for the following year. It is true Collins is signed to a one-year contract, but the option binds him legally and morally to Connie Mack next year as well as this.

"Moreover, Collins himself told me that he never had considered the idea of leaving the Athletics. He did not negotiate with the Federal League, let alone sign an agreement to sign with that circuit next Spring."

New Freak Motor Boat for Cup Races

CHICAGO, June 20.—A motor boat in the construction of which all previous laws of hull and engine construction have been largely disregarded, will represent the Chicago Yacht Club at Cowes, England, next August in the contest for the Harmsworth trophy, emblematic of the world's championship.

The new boat, Disturber IV., owned by Commodore James A. Pugh, will accompany the latter when he sails from New York on the Minnesota on July 18.

RED AND WHITE SOX MEET IN ODD GAME OF BIG SERIES TODAY

RED AND WHITE SOX IN BATTLE FOR ODD GAME

CHICAGO, June 20.—It is a battle for the odd game between the Red Sox and those who wear the socks of White today.

This for the reason, that while the men of Carrigan whaled those of Callahan in the first game, they couldn't repeat. The Chicago lads took the second game, 3 to 2.

That made the series stand one all, which means a desperate battle this afternoon.

Carrigan got the impression that the South Siders were easy for a left-hander. He must have secured that impression because the Chicago lads couldn't find Dutch Leonard in the first game.

He came right back with Ray Collins. This port sider wasn't a mystery at all. The Chicago lads, never accounted sluggers, lambasted him for eleven safe drives.

SPEAKER BACK IN STRIDE.

Two left-handers in a row is crowding things a bit. It's likely that Carrigan will shift to his right-hand twirlers this afternoon.

Joe Wood is his his first choice, while Reb Russell, who is a left-hander, will try to fool the Boston lads.

The White Sox figure they are the victims of ill luck. Tris Speaker is hitting. When the Boston lads landed here they were bewailing that their champion slugger wasn't connecting with the ball. But you don't hear them complain now.

In the first game Tris drove out a pair of hits, and while his pals got but five off Benz in the second, the centrefielder was present with one. It was a three-base drive to right, and the squeeze play, with Lewis bunting, put him across.

CARRIGAN HAD HARD DAY.

Manager Bill Carrigan was the sore athlete during the game. There was a high wind blowing, and the Chicago Sox insisted upon hitting high fouls. The manager went after two, and he was lucky to escape with his life. The wind would catch them, blow them this way and that, and upon one occasion one of the fouls barely missed the managerial head.

Manager Bill had a lovely time all right. And the further he missed them the louder did the fans howl, and the sorer did the Boss get.

Kramer Wins Sprint Races from Clarke

NEW HAVEN, June 20.—Frank Kramer, American champion cyclist, took two out of three mile heats in a special match race here with Jackie Clarke of Australia.

Kramer won the first and third heats handily in 2m. 35s. and 2m. 43 3-5s., respectively. Clarke won the second in 3m. 26s.

Track & Field

STEVE FARRELL, ATHLETIC COACH OF the University of Michigan, has the same situation to face as that of Harry Hillamen of Dartmouth. Farrell loses much of his varsity material, but like the Green coach he is favored with incoming stars from the freshman class.

HUGH M'GRATH IS ANXIOUS TO SEE more open meets in the Summer. Hugh has been identified with the local track game for years, and with his brother Frank, official handicapper, occupies a high place in amateur athletics in this district.

WHEN TELL BERNA, THE FORMER Cornell runner, made his record of 9 minutes 17 4-5 seconds in the two-mile race held at the Penn-Cornell meet two years ago, he underwent preliminary work that seldom falls to the lot of a runner out to establish a new mark. Berna's home is in Ithaca, and on the morning of the race his parents requested that he beat carpets. Tell beat them, and despite the disturbing experience he went through, was able to go out and break an American record in the afternoon.

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION FROM the West, Steve Farrell of Michigan will gain O'Brien from the freshman class, who has a mark of 9 4-5 for the dash. Wilson, a pole vaulter, has done 12 feet, while Herrick and Burbey are promising quarter-milers.

NEW YORK EXPERTS ARE STRONG ON the boost for Lawson Robertson to coach the next American Olympic team. Robertson was a big aid to Mike Murphy at the last Olympics, and if Jack Moakley of Cornell, the logical man for the position, decides to pass up the invitation it looks as if the Irish-American trainer stood a good chance to land it.

CAPTAIN PAUL PILGRIM OF THE NEW York A. C. has entered sixty men in the junior championship to be held at Travers Island this afternoon. The Irish-American A. A. has entered fifty-five men.

NEW YORK TRACK FOLLOWERS ARE sore over the fact that so many stars were advertised to start in the Mayo Mile at Celtic Park last Sunday, and but few good men appeared for the start. There were 5,000 fans on hand.

PAT DWYER, coach of the University of Louisiana, has been named to succeed the late Mike Murphy as coach of the University of Pennsylvania track team.

THIRTY THOUSAND ENTRY BLANKS have been issued to the schools, church associations, settlements and clubs for the New York City safe and sane Fourth of July celebration to be held on the forty playgrounds and athletic fields throughout the five New York boroughs.

OLD-TIME RUNNERS HAVE THEIR once-a-week reunions downtown. Prominent among them are Pooch Donovan, Bob Brown, Sam Ward, Leo Sullivan, Jack Scanlan and Johnnie Maloney. When Steve Farrell gets East and Keene Fitzpatrick and Johnny Mack return from their colleges they will join the group.

BILLY GRIMES IS AT HULL FOR THE Summer. Billy will help out on the big athletic program which the town provides for its gala day in August.

THE RECEPTION TENDERED JOHN O'Reilly by the students at Dorchester High was deserved. The veteran coach went to Dorchester from English High when track athletics at the former school were practically dead. After a few years there O'Reilly mustered together a team that was feared by the other Boston schools.

LARRY SWEENEY SAYS THE TEN-MILE race he has arranged between Jimmy Duffy, the Marathon winner, and the best of the local runners should be a thrilling contest. Larry has been in the track game for years as an expert and knows what he is talking about.

JAMES PICKED TO BEAT CARDS IN ODD GAME

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

It is horse and horse between the Braves and Cardinals. Thus, with honors even, the two teams will line up again for a Saturday game at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The Cards have shown their gameness and so have the Braves. Both teams are fighters and, barring the dilatory tactics of the visitors, the two battles already fought have been of a most exciting finish.

In all probability Manager Stallings will send Bill James to the hill this afternoon. James finished up yesterday's game, but as he only pitched one inning, this would not prove an obstacle in the way of his going back at the Cards this afternoon. Otto Hess is also ready to take a turn and if the weather is warm the Braves' boss may decide to use him.

For the Cardinals it will be "Slim" Sallee or "Polly" Perritt, while there is also a chance that Doak may be sent after the game. Sallee has finished up in both of the games played so far, and filled out the pinch role in an admirable manner.

President Fogarty of the Jersey City club, who has been meandering around these parts in search of players for the past few days, has finally been granted his wish. Manager Stallings has turned over the Cuban pitcher, Luque, to Fogarty, under the conditions that he can be recalled at a moment's notice. Luque is a fairly good moundsman and should win many games in the International League.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

THE YANKEES ARE SKIDDING DANgerously close to that cellar position, which they occupied during the greater part of last season.

FOSTER OF THE RED SOX AND TESreau of the Giants are among the prominent wielders of the whitewash brush in the two major leagues. Each has scored five shutouts.

THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE WHITE Sox pitchers vanished suddenly when the Athletics and Red Sox began to wave their bats. The Macklan artillery has always been the cure for too good pitching.

FOUR YEARS AGO, WHEN CHICK GANdil was sent to Montreal from the White Sox, he contended that the club owed him $200. Three times the National Commission denied the claim. Several days ago Gandil, who had practically given up hope of getting the money, called on President Comiskey to get a photograph. Before leaving the office Commy had a check drawn for $200, and he handed it to Gandil.

MANY NEW NAMES HAVE BEEN ADDED to the list of great college players during the season, now drawing to a close. Pitcher Neyland of West Point has been one of the most notable performers.

EITHER DAN MURPHY'S BATTING EYE is as good as ever, or the pitching in the Federal League is especially soft. The veteran is pounding the ball as hard and as often as at any time in his career.

PICKING A THIRD BASEMAN FOR THE Giants was a steady occupation before the season opened. Then McGraw made his selection, and Stock's work has more than vindicated the judgment of the Giants' leader.

THE ST. LOUIS FEDS. EASILY CARRY off the honors for overcoming a big lead with a twelfth inning rally. They needed seven runs to beat the Brookfeds, so they picked up eight. This game comes close to a record in number of runs scored in an extra inning.

THE ST. LOUIS CARDINALS HAVE A very nimble first baseman named Dressin in case Jack Miller is out of the game. Dressin may not be much of a batsman, but he handles himself like a veteran at first base.

HONUS WAGNER WENT THROUGH THE four games in New York without getting a hit. The Giant pitchers had his number, but not so with Gibson. The catcher made six hits in eleven times up.

THE WASHINGTONS HAVE LOST NINE out of twelve games in the West. The Red Sox and Athletics are doing the winning for the Eastern contingent.

BROOKLYN IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE ONE of the heaviest batting arrays in the National League, but batting evidently isn't the whole works.

THE BALTIMORE FEDERALS HAVE been tumbled out of first place. The Chifeds have become the pacemakers.

IT IS SAID THE FEDERAL LEAGUE IS trying to lure Larry McLean and Jack Murray away from the Giants.

Joe Eagan of South Boston, lightweight, defeated Johnny Glover of South Boston in their twelve-round bout at the University A. C.

Jack Read of Australia was to have met Eagan, but there was a dispute about the weight and Glover was substituted.

Dave Powers stopped Larry Conselo in two rounds. Johnny Noonan got the award over Frankie Barret in six rounds. Gardner Brooks of Lowell won the decision from Barney Snyder of Roxbury.

TWO FEATURE RACES ON CARD FOR BIKE FANS

RACING PROGRAM.

Sprint race (2 in 3), Bob Spears of Australia vs. Iver Lawson.

Motor-paced race (3 ten-mile heats, best two in three), Leon Didier, France, vs. Clarence Carman, Jamaica.

Two-mile amateur handicap, Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open for amateurs, one-mile invitation for amateurs, one-mile professional and three novice events.

Two feature races, a motor-paced and a special sprint match, are on the card for the bike fans at the Revere cycle track tonight. The sprint match will introduce Bob Spears, the Australian star, who will meet Iver Lawson, while the motor-paced race brings together Clarence Carman of Jamaica and Leon Didier of France.

The last meeting of the motor-paced rivals at the beach oval was marred by an accident to Didier in the second mile and, although he finished the race, it is believed the toss greatly impaired his chances and it was at his request as well as a large number of fans that tonight's race was arranged.

With Wiley out temporarily owing to injuries, Carman and Didier are the best pair of machine men in the game. Both are speedy and strong riders and the ten-mile record which Carman holds at present is in danger.

Great interest is also being shown in the sprint match between Spears and Lawson. Since his return to the game recently, Lawson has been traveling the mile in fast time.

Spears has never ridden here before but Newark reports say he is a crackerjack, and the fact that he worked his way into the finals of the grand prize of Newark races, while Jackie Clarke and other stars were shut out in the preliminary heats, testifies to his speed.

The fact that the Boston and Providence riders have banded together to beat each other should furnish some unusual competition in the professional, amateur and novice events.

Baseball Magnates Hold Session Today

NEW YORK, June 20.—The meeting of the National Commission that was scheduled to take place at the Waldorf Astoria didn't materialize for some unknown reason.

President Tener of the National League and Garry Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, were at the Waldorf, but Ban Johnson failed to put in an appearance, and it was announced that the meeting had been postponed until today.

Rosenberger Stars at New York Games

NEW YORK, June 20.—Jim Rosenberger, of the Irish American A. C., carried off the honors at the games of the Metropolitan Life Insurance A. A. at Celtic Park, winning the 100-yard dash from scratch in clever style. His great speed in the half mile relay enabled his team to capture the event.

PARIS, June 20.—After a lively discussion on the question of boxing competitions at the Olympic games to be held in Berlin of the International Olympic Congress. The subcommittee's report was adopted, providing that the weights of the contestants be taken in kilograms, and reducing the number of classes of boxers to six instead of the original eight.

It was decided to create an international boxing federation to control amateur contests, the first session to be held in London in 1915.

In England recently, Kinsella won fourteen out of fifteen matches against British professionals, losing the other match only after allowing his opponent a handicap.

Heavy Weather May Hold Up Shamrock Trial

GOSPORT, Eng., June 20.—The Shamrock IV's alterations having been completed it was intended to get her under way yesterday, but the tide in the morning did not rise sufficiently high to float her.

Owing to the change in her rig she has a lot of new gear to stretch and it was hoped to have done this yesterday so that a formal race could have been sailed today, but under the conditions the idea of sailing an actual race today may have to be abandoned unless the weather continues light, as it has been for the last day or so.

The new bowsprit of the yacht is sixteen feet out board. This gives about fifty feet of base in the fore triangle, and the spinnaker will be correspondingly increased. This would improve her immensely down the wind in light airs.

Her forestay comes down on deck about eight feet in board, but until she is afloat it is impossible to see what difference in her trim or water line length the removal of the fore part of her lead had made.

AND PETROV PAVIAC ENTERED AS COUNT ROSTOV BOWED HIMSELF GRACEFULLY OUT OF WHATEVER AFFAIRS THE BARON ANDREY MIGHT HAVE ON HAND.

"EXCELLENCY!" SAID THAT OFFICIAL FERRET OF THE OKRANA.

"WELL?"

"MY EXCUSES, EXCELLENCY! I WAITED UNTIL YOU HAD FINISHED DINNER."

"I DON'T WANT YOUR EXCUSES. I WANT YOUR REPORT."

"ACTING UNDER YOUR INSTRUCTIONS, I VISITED ANNA MIRREL."

THE BRISK CURTNESS OF "EXCELLENCY'S" TONES TOOK ON A BIT OF EAGERNESS NOW.

"YES! YES! AND WHAT THEN?"

"SHE BECAME VERY EXCITED. . . . SHE WAS GOING TO COMPLAIN TO YOU."

"BUT SHE HAS NOT COME."

"SHE DID COME HERE, EXCELLENCY."

"I WAS NOT TOLD. WHY WAS I NOT TOLD?" FUMED THE BARON.

Niko smiled at his abrupt dismissal. He was favorite nephew to the powerful head of the Okrana for two reasons. He knew very well how to attend to his own growing affairs—and he knew very well that he was not required to assist in the management of the affairs of Baron Andrey. That his uncle has as many "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" as the immortalized Chinaman, he knew—but he never gave any sign either of consciousness or of interest.

"I shall now follow my calling as a diplomat," said Niko, beginning that minute to follow it. "And sit up with my Baroness, if necessary all night, and let the burden of my song be, 'Anna Mirrel is an angel.'"

"Bravo! Bravo! You mustn't keep the dear girl waiting," applauded his excellency.

SOME ORDERS

And Petrov Paviac entered as Count Rostov bowed himself gracefully out of whatever affairs the Baron Andrey might have on hand.

"Excellency!" said that official ferret of the Okrana.

"Well?"

"My excuses, excellency; I waited until you had finished dinner."

"I don't want your excuses. I want your report."

"Acting under your instructions, I visited Anna Mirrel."

The brisk curtness of "Excellency's" tones took on a bit of eagerness now.

"Yes! Yes! And what then?"

"She became very excited. She was going to complain to you."

"But she has not come."

"She DID come here, Excellency."

"I was not told. Why was I not told?" fumed the Baron.

With a pleasing and attractive young fly walks into a web woven with it in view, no spider expects others of its kind to inform the intended prey that the spider is busy and not receiving little flies today. Flies are so likely to come to some understanding of webs if they are given sufficient time and leisure to acquire the worldly knowledge that will suggest to them the wisdom of not walking sweetly and neatly into webs.

"She was turned from your door," replied Paviac with the relish of a semi-barbarian for a situation in which a fellow servant will suffer as he himself has been in danger of doing except for this chance to shift the blame. "I was afraid to lose sight of her and so I followed her."

"Where did she go?"

"She walked about the streets and came back."

"But who—who turned her away—who dared to turn her away?" raged the Baron.

Paviac walked to the door with a cruel smile half hidden under his reddish moustache. "To make a Roman holiday." It took just such barbarian lusting for a sight of human suffering, as are the Kurds and Cossacks in the year of our Lord 1914!

"Peter! The Master wishes to see you," called Paviac with unction.

Gorgeous in his uniform of red and gold, Peter crept into the room. His bowed back and cringing mien were his badge of true servility—the servility that is the heritage of a serf and son of serfs.

"Excellency!" he fawned upon the word as if his great humbleness might save him from reproof and torture. Peter did not know what he had done. But inasmuch as his poor intelligence could never fathom the least of the Baron's intentions, he was always doing something, and the lash was often his lot.

A civil war was needed to release the alien black slaves of America half a century ago. No less than civil war, can save the serfs of Russia. But who will fight their battle?

"So you sent this lady away twice?" asked the Baron with ominous stillness.

"Your orders not to be disturbed were strict, Excellency." Peter cringed away across the room and his back bowed lower.

"You turned this lady away—you—you—" The Baron's clenched fist rose, but before it could fall Peter spoke the magic sentence that alone could save him.

"The lady is here now—waiting, Excellency."

"Ah! She is here, waiting. Apologize to Anna Mirrel, you form. Abject—do you hear—abjectly!" will suggest to them the wisdom of

"Wait—and bring her here at once! Wait—and send up champagne."

PETER ESCAPES.

"Yes, Your Excellency"—— and crawling and fawning like the whipped cur Russia had forced him to be, Peter made a safe escape from that interview with his master.

Paviac was of another timber. He understood his master, and so he must be treated with propitiatory kindness. The Baron spoke curtly now, but his very gentleness conveyed a hint of displeasure that was being imposed upon. Paviac, who sometimes wondered if he did not know too much for his own safety.

"Petrov Paviac, so far as you are concerned, the case of Anna Mirrel is closed. You may amuse yourself for the rest of the evening and report to your usual duty at the Bureau tomorrow morning."

Half a dozen silver pieces clinked as they passed from the Baron's hand to that of Paviac.

"I thank your Excellency," said the man. This was indeed an important case. The baron had never before given him more than three pieces. Paviac wondered how one of these Jews could be worth so much.

The man clicked his heels and bowed with a consciousness of service well performed. Then he started toward the hall door. The Baron pointed to the exit that led through dining room and kitchen. He had no intention that outgoing and incoming guests should meet. "Not that way" —said Baron Andrey grimly.

Paviac made his way across the room and vanished into the corridor that led to the dining room as Anna Mirrel slipped into the room from the hallway and stood like a wan little shadow of herself at the edge of the rosy glow of welcome that shone to her from the Baron's tired eyes and from the Baron's red-hued lamps.

"Anna Mirrel, Your Excellency," announced Peter, and vanished with great despatch.

To Be Continued Monday.

Declined

They had scrambled through the first dance on the program and he was leading her back.

"I could die dancing, couldn't you?" he asked.

"No," she replied. "There are pleasanter ways than being trampled to death."

CHAPTER IV.

The Boss Dunn Gang

NORRIS left the office some time later in the morning, and Louise, who had seen him place a sum of money in the drawer of his desk, was beginning to feel an awful desire for the touch of it in her fingers. She fought it as long as she could, but finally, when she could stand it no longer, she rose and went to the drawer, jerked it open, and seized the tempting package that lay within. Only for a moment she held it, however, and then her better self triumphed. What had she thought of doing? She had been about to steal from her lover—how horrible. And then she heard Norris outside and hastily thrust the money back as he came into the room. The stain had already begun to show.

Norris left the office again a few minutes later, and he asked Louise to accompany him. He wanted to make a call on the mother of the poor boy who had just been convicted, in spite of the fact that Norris had fought as hard as he could to save him. The two young people made their way into the cheerless place, but found the mother and her little daughter bearing up bravely.

ANOTHER UNFORTUNATE

"Oh, yes," said the woman, as Norris questioned her, "we trust you, Mr. Norris, and we know that you did all you could for Dick. There is a poor woman across the hall, though, who needs help more than we do."

Norris went across the hall quickly and knocked on the door of the miserable room. It was opened by a gray-haired woman, who looked at him inquiringly. Somehow he felt as if she had not always been in such straitened circumstances. Reassured by his manner, the woman unbent gradually and told him of her life. He promised to go to the orphan asylum to see about her child, who had been left there years ago, and then he called Louise in to comfort her. Little did the girl know that she was a blessing in disguise that day to her own mother. Norris kept his word, and the Mother Superior wrote to Mrs. Stevens immediately, telling her that Louise had been adopted by a respectable family, thus easing the mother's mind to some extent.

And all the while Boss Dunn and his candidate for Governor, Judge Harding, were scheming to get Wilfred Norris into their clutches. They knew he was far too dangerous as an enemy, so they lay in wait for him at the country club one afternoon, and, having engaged him in conversation, offered him a bribe if he would promise to stop his attack on the National Party.

Norris looked at the men a moment. "You can't be in earnest," he questioned finally.

Dunn leaned forward. "Of course I'm in earnest," he growled under his breath. "Just name your price, Mr. Norris! I can pay."

The veins in Norris' forehead swelled suddenly as he looked Dunn in the eye. Then he said, evenly, steadily:

"Let's put a stop to this, please, Dunn. You can't bribe me. I'm surprised you asked." For a moment there was silence. Then Dunn rose with a curse. "I'll get you for this, Norris," he sneered as he and Harding made their departure. But Norris only laughed as he watched them leave.

"We'll have to use other measures, and keep them hidden for a time," said Dunn evilly. "We'll watch our chance, it's sure to come soon," but little did they suppose that it would come as soon as it did.

That night Norris had some work to do at the office. He left the house with his younger brother, who was always getting into trouble of some kind, and the two were seen by Dunn, who had had the house watched. In the incredibly short space of time Dunn was down in the underworld with his gang, planning a scheme for getting Norris there.

THE SCHEME

"Call in Carrie," said one of the men, "she's got to do what I tell her to. We'll manage it." A moment later the woman called Carrie entered the room, and was motioned to the telephone and told to call a certain number.

"Say to Mr. Wilfred Norris," said the man at her elbow, "that his brother is down here on Second avenue in trouble and he had better get here as soon as possible. That'll fetch him," went on the man exultantly. "That brother of his is a wild one, always getting into trouble."

The man was right. Norris, receiving the message at the other end, started off immediately for the Harvest Moon, in spite of the fact that Louise begged him not to go. But little did he know that the girl, after a hasty decision, followed him hurriedly and reached the place a few minutes after he did.

Inside, Norris, having passed through a dance hall, was directed to an inner room. As he opened the door two men sprang on him, and a moment later he was lying across a little table, chloroformed.

Outside Louise hesitated a moment, and as she waited an officer came up to her.

"This is a rough place, miss," he said, looking at her in surprise. "Boss Dunn's gang hangs out here."

"Oh, you must help me," said Louise, ignoring his warning. "They have got Mr. Norris in there, and I am sure they don't mean any good. Listen, I have a plan. We'll pretend we're drunk, and they won't suspect anything."

The officer agreed, and a moment later the two were staggering across the dance hall. Even across the room Louise could detect a scuffling noise from the door at the farther end. They made their way cautiously toward it, and a second later the officer had blown his whistle and the place was raided. Norris was carried out from the inner room unconscious, but not dangerously hurt, rescued by the clever wit of a woman.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"WILFRED was saying the other night that the new song about Rip Van Winkle is selling big," said the Manicure Lady, "so he is going to put one out himself. The song he meant is the one that wants to know what the gent's name was that paid the rent for Mrs. Van Winkle while her husband was pounding his ear away in them Himalayan Mountains, or wherever it was that he done the dog. My brother has got a lot of sad song about Rip Van Winkle, and this is the way the first verse and chorus goes:

"Away off in the mountains lay a old man fast asleep.
And in a village far away his lonely wife did weep.
I miss poor Rip," she softly said, although he was a wob.
And gladly would I give my all to see him on the job.
I'll have to manage more rich man and cast away these duds;
True love is kind and tender, but it will not buy no spuds.

And yet I love no man but Rip. The more he is absent
He looked at me indignant and these sad words he did say:

CHORUS:

"I never had no sense at all
To go and get a wife;
To get a nagonate nowadays
Is just like serving life.
You say I am not tender
And you tell me I'm not true;
It must have been on Friday
That I first set eyes on you."

"That kind of a song is liable to make a lot of young married men feel discontented," said the Head Barber, "I think as long as a young married man thinks he is happy he ought to stay that way."

"Wilfred says that he don't care how many people he pukes unhappy by anything he writes," said the Manicure Lady. "But ever since that Chicago widow with the immature white hair turned him down and wouldn't marry him he has been a kind of a critic, as much as he can be anything, and I suppose he will stay that way until he runs across some other charmer that can bunk him back into a state of happiness. I didn't think much of the song when he showed it to me, but I think maybe it will have a good sale, because all that the public wants nowadays is something that nobody ought to care a rap for.

"Wilfred has got to show a little speed, anyhow. Father was after him pretty strong the other day, and while he didn't hold the door open like the old farmers in the play and say "Go, and never darken this door again!" he made it kind of plain to Father that unless he began bringing something home besides his boyish smile he would have to look up another boarding house."

"It would do him good if he had to get out and hustle," said the Head Barber. "I have had to be on the go ever since I was seventeen, and I figure that it helped me to succeed."

"I suppose it did, if you figure that scraping lowis is success," said the Manicure Lady. "I guess Wilfred is beginning to appreciate the fact that poets has to die to make a hit."

Hard to Please.

A man went to a quack doctor for treatment. He had a sharp pain internally, and remarked that it might be caused by his habit of sucking the point of a lead pencil. The quack said he was suffering from lead poisoning and gave him some pills which, he said, would cure him.

Next day the man came back very angry. "A friend of mine has examined the pills you gave me," he said, "and they are only bread."

"Of course they are," was the bland reply. "Don't you know that bread is the finest thing to remove pencil marks with? You didn't want me to give you india rubber pills, did you?"

The Dolly Waltz and How to Dance It

Article 3.—The Flirtation Step

Written from a Description by the Dolly Sisters

THE flirtation step is danced back to back with the hands held as in picture one. Of course, the position is the only real new part of this step, for there is really no change in the step at all.

The dancers go around the room in the straight waltz for as long a time as desired, looking at each other and slightly swaying the body as they move. This flirtation step is very popular. We have no end of people ask us about it after every performance, and remark on its grace and beauty. Its position being a little out of the ordinary is the only thing that makes it so very popular, and the dancers must remember that the effect will not be at all good in the flirtation if the dancers are not of a uniform height. A very tall man and a very small girl would make the dance ludicrous, for instead of looking levelly into each other's eyes, the girl would have to tip her head way upward, and the effect would be funny rather than otherwise.

Just before ending the flirtation step slip back into the first position of holding the hands, the right hand of the man and the left hand of the girl, high above the heads of both and then to the even waltz tempo come forward one step, then another step and three short steps, counting one, two, three, to a measure of waltz time, and then curtsey very low.

The cursy is a very beautiful part of the dance, and if practiced can be mastered very easily. The dancers take two steps back, and then slide the feet under them as though about to seat themselves on the floor Turk fashion. The picture should be carefully studied for this, as it shows to exactly what extent the limbs should be bent. Don't bend so far back that the balance cannot be kept readily, for a wobbly bow is worse than none at all. Rest the position on the backward limb and slide the other slightly forward, then drop the eyes and hold the hands low for two or three movements of the waltz. Then suddenly rise to the feet without any visible effort in changing position, rise to the toes for a moment and the dance is over. People who are watching do not expect the sudden rise from the floor, and their interest is held to the very end, thus making the dance doubly appreciated.

The top picture shows the curtsey step, a beautiful part of the dance, while the bottom picture shows the first position as described in the article. It is important that the partners be of uniform height.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHE DOESN'T CARE FOR YOU

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one and keep company with a girl two years by senior. I like her very much but she does not show very much affection toward me.

Whenever I go to see her she always asks for my friends and does not feel satisfied unless I bring them. She is fond of having them she sits in one corner with him and does not care very much for my company. She always wants to know everything that does not concern her in the least. E. S.

SINCE she so plainly shows that she cares for you only as a means for meeting other men, don't go to see her. You owe something to your own pride, you know.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and was going with a young man of the same age. We had a quarrel and fell out, and now I am going with his best friend, who, I think,in time I would be able to love. Still I cannot stop thinking of the first young man, with whom I am very much in love. I have heard from a friend that he still cares a good deal for me, but he, thinking I am to blame, will not make any overtures. Shall I write to him? WORRIED.

LOVE gets shipwrecked oftener on the stubborn conditions of "I am not to blame," than on any thing else. Since one must give in, show you are big enough to say you were wrong. The spirit with which he meets this avowal will show the manner of man he is and determine your future action.

IF YOU CAN'T REFORM HER, QUIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a young girl who has a habit of taking a few drinks when she is out. I have spoken to her about it, but she says that a few drinks will not do her any harm. As she is of foreign parentage, she says that the family was brought up on it. I wish you would tell me what to do in this case, as I love the girl very much.

W. H. A.

HER reason does not excuse her for the very bad habit of drinking in public. In her home, with her parents' example and sanction, it is a different story.

Unless you can break her of the habit, transfer your affections.

Home Treatment for Sallow, Wrinkled Skin

A. C. F. asks: "What should I do for my sallow complexion, and how can I get rid of my wrinkles?"

Sallowness is best removed by removing the cause. This is effectually accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which gives the fine cuticle an opportunity to peel off in fine particles scarcely noticeable to the naked eye. Within a week or so you will have an enviable complexion, the new skin exhibiting a healthful, youthful tint incomparable with artificial coloring. Get an ounce of the wax, and dissolve it in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathe your face in this every morning for a while. The result will surprise you.—Beauty's Mirror. ADVERTISEMENT.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were more active, comparatively, today than yesterday and most of the leaders showed small gains at close. This was after a dull and hesitant opening. For awhile the New York market almost stood still and the one in Boston was lifeless. Uncertainty as to when the Interstate Commerce Commission will decide the Eastern freight rate case deterred traders from commitments. There is more fear that it will not be satisfactory to railroads when it comes. One opinion is that it will be "Long on advice and short on advances. Pessimism prevailed regarding the result of mediation of trouble in Mexico, but while there was less hope of a speedy settlement of the trouble fears had little influence upon stocks. Americans were there. First hour sales in New York were under 26,000. For the morning they totalled about 61,000.

At the close in New York gains included Southern Pacific ⅝, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading ⅛, New Haven ⅛, American Can ⅛, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated ¼, Northern Pacific ⅛, Union Pacific ½, Utah Copper ⅛ and Western Union ⅛. Among declines wer Rock Island common ¼, preferred ¼, and Canadian Pacific ⅝. Lehigh Valley and Baltimore & Ohio were unchanged.

In Boston New Haven was unchanged and Boston & Maine ⅛ lower. Gains here included Elevated ½, United Fruit ¼, American Telephone ⅛, Butte & Superior ⅝, North Butte ⅛ and Shoe ⅛.

In brief the New York bank statement was as follows: Average statement: Excess cash reserve $39,289,850, decrease $7,898,100; loans increase $3,646,000; specie decrease, $11,371,000; local tenders increase, $3,113,000; net deposits decrease, $1,676,000; circulation decrease, $104,000. Actual statement: Loans decreased, $5,204,000; specie decrease, $12,784,000; legal tenders increase, $4,967,000; net deposits decrease, $20,417,000; reserve decrease, $3,471,950.

PRESIDENT WILSON STANDS PAT.

President Wilson stands pat on his determination to have trust legislation enacted at this session of Congress and will not consent to adjournment before the administration bills are put through. He has been informed, it is stated, by some Senators, that they can be enacted early in August. Others are of the opinion that it may take until December to get them passed.

Democrats in the House are anxious for early adjournment. They want to pass the appropriation measures and go home. They have heard from their districts, and most of those seeking re-election have been informed that they are going to face a hard fight. The reports they get is that dull business, an army of unemployed and the unpopularity of repeal of free tolls for American coasting craft using the Panama Canal, all indicate a political overturn at the polls in November. They want to get home and at campaign work as soon as possible. But Mr. Wilson cares more about having his policies executed than about their individual political fortunes. Leader Underwood went to the White House and stated the case from the House viewpoint to the President. Mr. Wilson believes that business is improving and that big crops are going to bring prosperity. He was obdurate after hearing the Underwood plea. But a Washington dispatch says:

"It is learned that the House leaders will insist further on the President's abandonment of his legislative plans for this session.

"Mr. Underwood declined to discuss details of his conference at the White House.

"Mr. Underwood calculates Congress cannot complete the appropriation bill inside of four weeks. The House will not be able to dispose of the remaining bills by July 1, when the new fiscal year begins. Enabling acts will have to be passed to provide for government expenditures until all the appropriation bill shall become law.

"He is not optimistic that the Senate will rush consideration of the trust bills. The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee is taking its time in the study of the House bills, and is making a number of important amendments."

GOLD EXPORTATION TO CEASE?

It is understood that exportation of gold is about over and that after another shipment to Paris next week the present movement will cease. It is said that the Treasury Department is anxious to end it and for that reason will supply bankers who have to make shipments to pay debts due in Europe with gold bars instead of gold coin. Gold bars to the amount of $25,000,000 have been transferred to New York. Coin is paid out at its face value. Upon bars the government gets a premium. This week gold to the amount of $43,000,000 was transferred from sub treasuries in various parts of the country to the one in New York. Gold previously shipped this week from New York for Europe, or to go today totalled $15,100,000. For the present movement shipments have totalled $54,750,000; since the first of the year $70,750,000.

The bar shipment to New York of $25,000,000 was gold from Denver. From Philadelphia the government transferred $13,000,000 in coin, also $5,000,000 from Baltimore. The government had to pay about $50,000 for transportating the $43,000,000.

RAIL BUYING IN JUNE.

Rail buying so far this month has been on a larger scale than for some time and a large part of the orders placed by railroads for this kind of equipment was imperative. The Pennsylvania road is understood to need about 70,000 tons, but so far has ordered only 5,000. The Maryland Steel Co. has received from Australia an order for 16,000 tons. The St. Paul road has recently ordered about 32,000 tons. There has been enough car ordering to create more of a demand for steel shapes and bars. But improvements in the steel trade has not been marked enough to affect prices. They are still very low. There is not much profit for steel makers in the small volume of business they have been doing.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The labor troubles at the Rio Tintos mines has been settled and miners have resumed work.

Imports at Boston increased $6,886,645 during May last, and exports decreased $869,707. For five months the increase in imports was $19,730,381, the decrease in exports $5,139,070.

Owing to the strike, Lake Superior copper production in 1913 was only 136,869,020 pounds, the smallest total in eighteen years.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON JUNE 20, 1914

BOSTON AMERICAN
80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 20, 1914.

The Legislature Must Be Made to Understand That the Public Is Tired of Trifling With the Railroad Question and Demands Action

A majority of the Railroad Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature has recommended that there should be no legislation this year to remove the throttling grip of the New Haven from the throat of the poor, crushed, bound-down Boston & Maine.

These statesmen and patriots want a recess committee to study the whole railroad question and to report their grave and profound cogitations to the NEXT General Court, ONE YEAR HENCE.

What does this astonishing proposition mean? Is it a RAILROAD TRICK TO CIRCUMVENT THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT AND GOVERNOR WALSH, who has for six months been manfully striving to carry out THE PLATFORM PLEDGE OF HIS PARTY to separate the New Haven Railroad from its present disastrous control of the Boston & Maine? It looks like it. Yet it seems scarcely possible that the New Haven Railroad directors would dare to trifle with the Governor, the national government and the overwhelming public sentiment in New England at this delicate and critical juncture of their own personal affairs.

But the report of the majority of the Railroad Committee is most unfortunate for the New Haven just now, when the good faith of that railroad ought to be ABOVE SUSPICION.

Consider the facts of the situation, which are known to everybody. Everybody knows that the Railroad Committee is always packed by the railroads. Independent men sometimes get on this committee, but it is either by mistake or when the railroad is sure that its own creatures will be a majority of the committee.

Everybody knows that this Railroad Committee has not made an important recommendation contrary to the orders of the railroad lobby for years.

Everybody knows that President Howard Elliott and the more influential New Haven directors did not want to give up the Boston & Maine; that when the national government declared that the present relations between the two railroads was a violation of the anti-trust law, the New Haven wanted ten years in which to sell the stock by which its control of the Boston & Maine was exercised; that when a ten years' delay was refused the New Haven, it demanded five years, and that when this was denied, it insisted upon and obtained two years and a half of grace for the sale of its stock, but with an immediate surrender of its control.

But everybody does NOT know this interesting fact, that during the negotiations which led up to the agreement for the separation of the two railroads, the New Haven directors originally wanted Massachusetts to pass the enabling legislation and bind the people of this State before the stockholders of the New Haven had ratified the agreement. Governor Walsh would not stand for any such proposal. He insisted that the State was the creator and the New Haven was only the creature, and that the State, as the superior party, should withhold its action until the New Haven had bound itself by a vote of its stockholders.

Under all these circumstances, does not the action of the Railroad Committee, always the creature of the railroads, have an ugly look? The AMERICAN does not say that the New Haven directors are guilty of any such duplicity, but it DOES say that many a man has been convicted of crime on circumstantial evidence less strong than this.

Public Service Commissioner Anderson suggests another explanation of the strange conduct of this Railroad Committee. He says that President Elliott has determined this year not to use the old corrupt lobby, but to ask for nothing from the Legislature that is not fair and then to rely upon the fairness of the Legislature to meet the railroad halfway. Mr. Anderson intimates that the old lobby has become alarmed at this sudden loss of lucrative business and is now industriously engaged in an attempt to teach the corporations that they cannot employ Sunday School methods to obtain even fair play at the hands of the Legislature.

Mr. Anderson's suggestion is interesting and may be true.

But whatever may account for the attitude of the Railroad Committee, we must not have another year of the New Haven management of the Boston & Maine. The Democrats are pledged in their platform to end that railroad's wretched servitude to Wall Street NOW, during THIS session of the Legislature. Surely no Democratic legislator will care to SMIRCH HIS PARTY HONOR AGAIN THIS YEAR AFTER THE EXPERIENCE OF THOSE DEMOCRATIC APOSTATES WHO BETRAYED THEIR PARTY BY SURRENDERING THE WESTERN TROLLEYS TO THE NEW HAVEN LAST YEAR.

And there ought to be enough intelligent, independent Republicans and Progressives in the Legislature to give us the legislation which will separate these two railroads and remove the thumb of Wall Street from New England's commercial jugular vein.

Let us have the legislation to enable these roads to separate and then let the people of the State decide whether or not they want the State to buy the control of the Boston & Maine.

Is Thaw Sane or Insane?

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

A number of newspapers sympathizing with Stanford White, to whose crimes Thaw put an end, are desperately anxious that Thaw shall not regain his freedom. They are free with their advice to judges in the matter.

Thaw killed White. It might, perhaps, have been as well had justice then killed Thaw.

But the trial declared him insane—largely because the jury felt that the killing of Stanford White was a useful act.

If Thaw is insane he should go back to the insane asylum. If he is not insane he should go free.

There should not be any especial interpretation of the law to oblige the friends and sympathizers of the late Stanford White, or to comfort those who say they fear that Thaw will hurt them if set free.

The attempt to extradite Thaw as a criminal, guilty of conspiracy, is preposterous. If he was a lunatic he COULD not conspire. The law does not hold any lunatic responsible for his acts.

If Thaw was sane and capable of entering into a conspiracy he should not be returned to the asylum. There is no law to keep a sane man there.

The high court should settle for itself the question of Thaw's sanity or insanity. And the sympathetic friends and associates of White, whom he destroyed and whose criminal career he cut short, should have as little as possible to say in the matter.

Sacredness of Family Life

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED

Author of "The Etiquette of New York Today."

IN these days of increasing social unrest, when bold utterances and subtle arguments are being put forth to disturb and to mislead, it is well to consider some of the dangers which seem to threaten us.

There is always danger in anything that mars the peace, the inner happiness of home and family life. There is always great danger in revolutionary ideas which aim to slacken the bonds of society.

An unfailing test of the condition of society is to be found in the estimate of family life formed by any people. It has been felt and expressed by all moralists, all serious thinkers on human advancement, that immense dangers are involved in any injury to the family, any attack on the restraints of family life, any tampering with right regulations in this realm. Wherever the bonds of family life are relaxed social life itself suffers. The very foundations are shaken.

At the root of social well-being and right feeling is the subject of marriage and the family. The serious and sacred character of marriage and everything that affects it cannot be overestimated. Marriage and family life are divinely instituted and intended to teach the sanctity and dignity of the relations of home, the sacredness of affection, the duties and obligations of one person toward another.

If the home is what it ought to be the children will carry with them through their lives the traditions, teachings, memories and affections which illuminated the early years and will know how to apply these influences when they grow to manhood and womanhood.

Family life to be right and at its best must be guided by religion, must teach high ideals, not merely by direct teaching, but by the steady influence of high purposes and lives aiming to be consistent.

A nation cannot be truly great without a serious sense of the sacred origin of law and order, and thus one of the most valuable consequences of the training of a Christian home and of respect for marriage is that children learn that sense of law and order and the sense of duty, responsibility and obligation necessary for their fulfilling later the duties of good citizens.

Good Name Rather Than Riches

By REV. ANDREW J. MEYER

IN the Scriptures we read how Jonathan and his armor bearer slew the Philistines, the enemies of his country. Jonathan was eminently fitted for his day and age. He was a warrior and needed no sound of trumpet to summon him to fortitude. His muscles were like braided steel and his heart incapable of fear.

He had the qualities of courage and endurance most needed then, and it is a fact delightful to observe that through all the centuries since Jonathan's day men have been found willing to put off the old man of fear, vacillation and double dealing and put on the new man of valor, rectitude and righteousness.

That kind of man is needed today. So long as there are false standards in society and evil practices in business, so long as iniquity is whitewashed, falsehood veneered, crime sheltered, justice defeated, the march of civilization and the cause of Christ hindered, so long men are needed to plead and agitate like reformers, discern like prophets, act like heroes and endure like martyrs.

* * *

The difficulty seems to be that the wrong in our business and political life is often engineered, if not executed, by men who are scrupulously correct in their personal behavior.

They are good husbands and kind fathers. Their home life is above reproach. They pay their debts. They scorn a lie when no business interest is at stake.

And yet in their business and political relations they have no standards whatever. Here they are morally color blind, for they see no distinction between right and wrong.

* * *

To meet these conditions in such a ways as to reveal the movement of God in the march of events, we must have a vision of what a true and perfect life should stand for.

What we need today is the masculine integrity which obeys spiritual vision.

A man may be intellectually brilliant, a genius in business, a captain in industry, but if he lacks integrity the world draws back from him and he loses its respect.

A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.

The government begins a campaign designed to acquaint the public with the practically limitless supply of good, inexpensive food which is to be found in the ocean, lakes and rivers, and which is at present neglected by too many households. Did Grandma Have It Easier Than We Do?

By DOROTHY DIX.

"SOMEBODY has called this the woman's century," said the woman of fifty, "and we women go about beating cymbals and emitting whoops of joy and congratulating ourselves upon the progress our sex has made, and on how much better off we are than our grandmothers were.

"Poor grandmama couldn't go to college, and she couldn't vote, and she couldn't engage in gainful occupations, and her conversational range reached from the kitchen to the nursery, and she was old at fifty. Dear me! What a sad lot was grandmama's! And so, whenever we thought of her we went out and dropped a tear on her grave.

"But there are times when I'm in doubt about whether pity, like charity, doesn't begin at home, and when I'm inclined to think that grandmother had a cinch, and that we poor, modern women are the ones that stand in need of sympathy. For if grandmama didn't have many opportunities, neither did she have many responsibilities, and she was beautifully and gloriously selfish.

"She hadn't assumed the burden of the world as we have. She did not feel responsible for society, nor posterity, nor anything in the wide world. As long as everything went all right with her household, the balance of the universe might go hang for all she cared.

"When grandmama fell in love with grandpapa she married him right off the bat without being bothered) with any eugenic doubts. She didn't trouble her head with any investigation into the ancestry of his family or her family to find out what congenital traits or diseases their possible children might have. Nor did she inquire into grandpapa's morals. For a man to have a dark past was considered rather romantic than otherwise in those halcyon days, and if later on she was called upon to help him harvest his wild oats once she called it all a mysterious dispensation of Providence that she could never account for, and so escaped all heartburnings and regrets.

"The modern girl can't marry that way. She knows so much that she is torn with a thousand fears and doubts, and she goes into marriage burdened with the sense of her responsibility to her possible children. That's the reason that there are fewer love idyls now. Hygiene has sort of knocked Cupid out of the ring.

"Then grandmama never had to bother her head about keeping grandpa fascinated. Probably men were just as much of a roving nature then as now, but nobody had invented the theory that in order to retain a husband's love a wife should keep herself young and slim, and beautiful, in addition to raising a family, and that she should be able to be a whole vaudeville entertainment upon such occasions as grandpapa elected to stay at home.

"Grandmama could read whatever sort of dubdub she liked, because nobody expected a married woman to know anything except the cook-book, or to be able to talk about anything except her babies. She didn't have to be conversant with the latest scientific discovery, the newest political scandal, the most-talked-of picture, the biggest book of the day, the last development in the latest war. Grandmama could get fat as she liked, or scrawny as she pleased, because having caught her man, she had no further use for hair, and nobody noticed whether she was polchritudinous or not as she moved sedately around her sedate little circle.

"Grandmama didn't have to keep up with the fashions nor bother herself about the latest Paris craze. By the time a woman had gotten to forty she was supposed to be so old that she was done with all earthly vanities, and to have turned her thought toward heaven instead of the millinery.

"Oh, believe me, our grandmothers had a cinch," said the woman regretfully. "Now I'm fifty. When my grandmother was fifty she had already attained to a special chair and a chimney corner and a black silk dress and a lace cap and corsets and flat-heeled shoes, and had become a placid onlooker at life.

"And look at me, worked to death trying to keep young, doing without things to eat I like to keep my figure, buying clothes to make clothes than I did when I was twenty, because a middle-aged woman is no dependent on her dress, snatching every moment to read and study in a vain attempt to keep up with the times, rushing from one board meeting to another because my heart is torn with all the miseries in the world, and I feel that my sole salvation depends on my doing my tiny bit to help humanity!

"And that's why I say that our grandmothers had the best of it. We've not progress, but they had restfulness. They had a circumscribed, placid little world, whose world was bounded by the family circle."

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

How Will Anybody Know They Are Lunatics?

The inmates of the Ohio Insane Asylum are to attend a big league ball game July 4; probably to get a few pointers in raving.

It Won't Work

Rolling Helps People to Keep Young.—Headline.

Nonsense! The ocean has been rolling for hundreds of thousands of years, and it is the oldest body of water on the planet.

Generally Accepted Policy

Nobody can be found now who advocates the repeal of the one-term plank in the Democratic platform.

Appropriate

Why not present King George with the pen with which the Tolls Repeal bill was signed?

Vain Search

Many great political leaders are now looking around for a crowd to follow.

Atlanta Still Has a Shade the Best of It, However

Mrs. Pankhurst is making a reputation for Holloway Jail as a health resort which is second only to the one Charles W. Morse has made for the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

That Wasn't His Job

Brander Matthews says that Shakespeare was not a player of great power. He may not have been especially gifted as a stage carpenter either, but that doesn't seriously impair his reputation.

Right!

We agree with suffragists, who intimate that no wounded soldier ever tells a Red Cross nurse that woman's place is in the home.

Let Us Be Human

Secretary Bryan ought to permit Ambassador Page to come home for the Fourth of July. It would embarrass him dreadfully to have to meet Englishmen on such an anniversary.

Better Hurry or It Will Be Too Late

Why doesn't business ask the administration to mediate?

Bad Sportsmanship

"The American ponies were not as fast as the British ponies."—A polo expert.

That's right, blame the horses! They can't come back!

Desperate

Bryan may possibly succeed in butting into the Albanian mix. After what they've gone through lately the Albanians are willing to try anything, once.

And It Isn't Enough

They've got the tennis cup, the golf cup and the polo cup, and we still have Wilson, that's all.

Not Working for Their Health

Judging by the time consumed, it is evident that the mediators are working by the day and not by the job.

There Is Still Something Rotten in Denmark

After giving women the franchise Denmark now raises the voting age to thirty. This, of course, is disfranchisement. Women never live to be thirty.

Spreading

The psychological character of that business depression appears to have helped it to get into general circulation.

Unwarranted Interference

What right has a business man to ask Congress for anything? How can Congress possibly serve business and the administration at the same time?

Pass the Alibis, Quick.

"I will treat as a personal and political enemy any person who mentions my name in connection with ambitions I do not possess."

Did we ever mention his name in any connection? We leave it to you! Did we?
